"Greenbacks" at a Discount in New-Orleans.

The steamer North Star, with New Orleans dates to the 30th of January has arrived here. Her advices are not so late as were received by the Marion and published yesterday.

Among her passengers is Col. HENRY C. DEMING—late Acting Mayor of New-Orleans and commander of the Twelfth Connecticut Volunteers.

Brig.-Gen. BOWEN had been installed as Provost Marshal of the Department of the Gulf; and Col. FRENCH's successor, as Provost Marshal of the State of Louisiana, had been inducted on the 28th ultimo.

Col. FRENCH was still holding the office of Chief of Police of New-Orleans.

Of military movements nothing could be made public. Gen. BANKS was busy over his plans.

Gen. AUGUR was in command at Baton Rouge, and the troops there were drilling by companies, by battalions, by regiments and by brigades.

Gen. NEAL DOW, who had been in command of the forts for some time back, was in New-Orleans, and it was understood that he would have a command in front, which is all that he asks. The troops regard him as a brave man, and this sort of faith is a great thing for a commander and the men.

Gen. DOW has been cited to appear before the Sixth District Court of New-Orleans, Judge HOWELL, to answer a charge preferred against him of stealing silver ware to the value of $160. The charge is preferred by BRADISH JOHNSON, a native of New-York and a citizen of the United States.

Port Hudson was growing stronger and stronger every day. The rebels were sure that no force from New-Orleans could dislodge them. Indeed, they give it out, that if assaulted and victory is theirs, they will push on to New-Orleans, shoot all the Yankees, hang all the loyal men, roast all the police, and burn the Delta office and its editors.

NAT, the robber, whom Judge BELL sent to the Parish Prison for twenty years for robbing FRANKO and others, has been liberated by an order from Washington, and was at large in New-Orleans.

On the evening of the 23d ult., a steamer, rigged as a bark, with a rakish appearance, came in sight of the Southwest Pass. She had nothing above the top-masts, and moved slowly by the Pass, apparently watching for some signals, or expecting some.

A number of the Pass pilots are now under arrest, for communicating with a strange vessel some days since, and it is supposed further attempts will be made preparatory to a raid on the river.

The Morning Light, captured at Sabine Pass, was a nine-gun sailing ship. We do not learn that her Captain fought his ship.

The rebels took 109 prisoners.

Assistance was sent over from Galveston, and the rebels seeing the Federal gunboats approaching, set fire to the Morning Light and destroyed her.

The schooner captured was the transport Velocity.

At the time of the capture of the Morning Light and the Velocity a dead calm prevailed.

The Picayune and True Delta had been warned for publishing contraband news, which was deemed of a character calculated to inspire the city rebels.

The Delta of the 29th ultimo, contained an ardent appeal to the Northern Press to cease their political bickerings and sustain the Government cordially.

Greenbacks were at two per cent. discount in New-Orleans on the 29th ultimo. It was thought that the local Banks had combined against the Federal currency.

Affairs up the River—Capture of the Antona by the Pocahontas—The President's Proclamation and How it Works—Scenes and Abuses—Trouble in Lafourche District—Important New Order by Gen. Banks—Petition of the Colored Population—Union Meetings.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW-ORLEANS, Thursday, Jan. 29, 1863.

Affairs up the river have made no progress yet; although the fact of Gens. BANKS, AUGUR, SHERMAN, and WEITZEL having met here this morning, in close consultation, looks as if something were brewing. The only news of any consequence I have heard—and that is no very grand matter—is that four of our officers at Baton Rouge have resigned, tired—so report says, at least—of this "abolition war." Of course, this little tit-bit of scandal was too luscious a morsel for the Secessionists to neglect; so they have been improving it, and I to-day heard the list of resignations run up to one, two, three—and even four hundred!

CAPTURE OF THE ENGLISH STEAMER ANTONA.

Intelligence has reached us that on the 7th inst., while the United States gunboat Pocahontas, Lieutenant Commander GAMBLE, stationed off Mobile, was out overhauling a vessel which turned out to be one of Gen. BANKS' transports, she discovered a steamer under the land, several miles east of Fort Morgan. She immediately made after the strange sail, which stood off, and a chase ensued which lasted from 10 A. M. until 11 P. M., when the Pocahontas came up with her prize about thirty miles S. S. E. of San Blas.

It proved to be the British iron propeller Antona, of Glasgow, Scotland, GRINDLE, Master, with a crew of 23 men, from Liverpool, via Teneriffe, St. Thomas and Havana, and bound to Mobile with an assorted cargo, consisting of powder, small arms, brandy, saddles, tea, &c., vessel and cargo being valued at some $300,000.

The Pocahontas was considerably out of repair at the time, and but for a strong gale from the north and west, she would not have overtaken the stranger. The sea ran so high as to make it quite impossible to board her that night, and the prize was, consequently, ordered to lay to under the guns of the Pocahontas until next morning, when she was taken possession of by Acting Master E. BAKER, (of Plymouth, Mass.,) Acting Ensign CHASE, Second Engineer ADAIR, and Third Engineer ROSS, of the Pocahontas, and brought to this port.

The Antona was in charge of a Mobile pilot, who, when chased by the Pocahontas, wanted to run the vessel ashore, but was prevented by the Captain. They had communicated with the rebels on shore previous to being seen by the Pocahontas, and failing to force the blockade at Mobile, were making arrangements to land the cargo on the beach, in the neighborhood of Perdito Inlet. In this the crew of the steamer counted upon the aid of a strong force of rebel soldiers, who, as in the case of the attack on the steamer R. R. Cuyler, when she captured the schooner Wilder last Winter, were to repel the blockaders.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

I am sorry to say that the President's 1st of January Proclamation does not work very smoothly; whether through any inherent clumsiness in the machine, or carelessness and apathy in the engineers who are driving it, or both causes combined, I really don't know. But one thing certain is that Freedom and Slavery have, somehow or other, got so jumbled up and confused here that it is hard to tell which is boss.

What with freedom being proclaimed in some parts of the State, while other parts are exempted—the injuries inflicted by confounding those who are slaves with those who are not—the alternate raising and crushing the hopes of slaveowners, by inducing them to expect a return of their power, at the same time that every step apparently only takes them further from their object—all go to keep the place in a perfect state of nervous excitement. In the meantime—as always happens in such cases—the intermediate weakest party, about whom all this wrangling is going on, comes in for buffets on all sides. The poor colored man, whether free or slave, finds himself a shuttlecock between two battledores—or like an unfortunate fish for which two greedy pelicans are contending.

As might naturally be expected, this attempt to be carrying out two antagonistic programmes at the same time has already given rise to no end of abuses and disorders. A few evenings ago, the whole city was thrown into great commotion by the simultaneous arrest of all colored people in the streets, of every age, sex and condition of life, huddling them all into jail. As this was done without any previous notice or advertisement—at least such as very few, if any, ever heard of—the result may be easily imagined. The scene at the jail, where respectably dressed females and children—some as fair as the fairest Caucasians—were piled ignominiously and promiscuously with the lowest of both sexes—all weeping, imploring, and almost scared to death, was something that will not easily be forgotten by those who saw it.

TROUBLE IN LAFOURCHE DISTRICT.

While matters are in this state in town, the question is no less agitated in the rural districts. In that of Lafourche, where Lieut.-Col. LULL is the Provost Judge, it is stated as matter of public notoriety, that slaveholders are actually permitted to come within our lines and sieze upon the contrabands whenever and wherever they can find them. Men, women and children have been seized, tied together, put into carts, and fairly driven beyond our lines, before their claimants; and, in one or two instances—so my informant declares—actually by the aid of our own cavalry men. These scenes are related as occurring at or very near Thibodeaux, the headquarters of Gen. WEITZEL.

GEN. BANKS' ORDER NO. 12.

Whether immediately caused by these proceedings or not, I cannot say, but Gen. BANKS—doubtless foreseeing that it was impossible for such a state of things to continue without some serious breach of the public peace—this morning issued the following order, while reprinting the President's Proclamation:

PROMULGATING THE EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW-ORLEANS, Jan. 29, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS No. 12.—The following Proclamation of the President of the United States, dated Jan. 1, 1863, is published in General Orders for the information and government of the officers and soldiers of this command, and all persons acting under their authority.

The Proclamation designates portions of the State of Louisiana, which are not to be affected by its provisions. The articles of war, however, forbid officers of the army and navy to return slaves to their owners; and the inevitable conditions of a state of war, unavoidably deprive all classes of citizens of much of that absolute freedom of action and control of property which local law and the continued peace of the country guaranteed and secured to them. The forcible seizure of fugitives from service or labor by their owners is inconsistent with these articles and conditions of war, inasmuch as it leads to personal collisions and the disturbance of the public peace, and it cannot be permitted.

Officers and soldiers will not encourage or assist slaves to leave their employers, but they cannot compel or authorize their return by force.

The public interest peremptorily demands that all persons without other means of support shall be required to maintain themselves by labor. Negroes are not exempt from this law. Those who leave their employers will be compelled to support themselves and families by labor upon the public works. Under no circumstances whatever can they be supported in idleness, or allowed to wander through the parishes and cities of the State without employment. Vagrancy and crime will be suppressed by an enforced and constant occupation and employment.

Wise men accept and adapt themselves to the circumstances which surround them, where it is impossible to change them. Planters and other employers will do well to consider the condition of public affairs while consulting their own wishes.

Upon every consideration, labor is entitled to some equitable proportion of the crops it produces. To secure the objects both of capital and labor, the Sequestration Commission is hereby authorized and directed, upon conference with planters and other parties, to propose and establish a yearly system of negro labor, which shall provide for the food, clothing, proper treatment and just compensation, for the negroes, at fixed monthly rates, or an equitable proportion of the yearly crop, as may be deemed advisable. When accepted by the planter or other parties, all the conditions of continuous and faithful service, respectful deportment, correct discipline and perfect subordination, shall be enforced on the part of the negroes by the officers of the Government. To secure their payment, the wages of labor will constitute a lien upon its products.

This may not be the best, but it is now the only practicable system. Wise men will do what they can, when they cannot do what they would. It is the law of success! In three years from the restoration of peace under this voluntary system of labor, the State of Louisiana will produce threefold the product of its most prosperous year in the past.

The Quartermaster's Department is charged with the duty of harvesting corn on deserted fields, and cultivating abandoned estates. Unemployed negroes will be engaged in this service under the control of suitable agents, or planters, with a just compensation in food, clothing and money, and under such regulations as will tend to keep families together, to impart self-supporting habits to the negroes, and protect the best interests of the people and the Government.

By command of Maj.-Gen. BANKS.

RICHARD B. IRWIN, Lieutenant-Colonel, Assistant Adjutant-General.

PETITION OF THE COLORED POPULATION.

Gen. BANKS' order does not in any way touch the previous question of the arbitrary arrests that have occurred and are still occurring among absolute freemen. The old "curfew" laws, which were in vogue in the palmy days of Slavery, seem to have sprung into new and vigorous existence in a single day. By 7½ P. M. every man, woman and child of color, free or slave, no matter what their occupations may be, have to be in doors,—or are liable to be seized and thrust into jail.

The free people of color, not understanding what they have done to meet such treatment under the Government of the United States, and not construing the President's Proclamation as warranting it, have prepared the following respectful address, which is to be delivered to the proper authorities to-morrow:

To His Excellency Brig.-Gen. George F. Shepley, Military Governor of Louisiana:

The petition of the undersigned respectfully represents:

That they are free colored persons, and natives of this State and city, and all of them born free, as well as their parents before them; that they are loyal citizens of the United States, devotedly attached to the Constitution thereof, and to the preservation of the unity of its Government and the absolute maintainance of its laws; that many of them are owners of real estate, and all of them owners of movable property, as such, contributing by the payment of taxes to the support of the Government; that many of them are engaged in trade and commercial occupations, and others of them engaged in mechanical and industrial pursuits; that they are all law-abiding citizens, and have uniformly conducted themselves in an orderly and peaceable manner; and that among them are to be found many of the descendents of those brave men of color whom the illustrious JACKSON did not hesitate to address as his "fellow-citizens," and to summon to the field of battle to repel the enemies of their country.

Your petitioners further show that by the laws of Louisiana they are not only entitled to the privileges of free men, but the presumption of law lies in favor of their freedom; that as early as the year 1810 in the case of ADELE vs. BEAUREGARD, 1 MARTIN's Reports, page 183, in the Superior Court of the Territory of Orleans, Judge F. X. MARTIN presiding, it was held "that persons of color are presumed to be free," that in the case of the State vs. CECIL in the Superior Court of the State of Louisiana in 1812, MATTHEWS, LEWIS and MARTIN, Judges, reported in 2d Martin, 208, the Attorney-General offered a woman of color as a witness, the Court said: "The woman being of color, the presumption is that she is 'born free'"; that these views were reaffirmed in PILIE vs. LALANDE et al., 7 Martin, new series, p. 648, and have ever since been the well-settled principles of the jurisprudence and law of this State.

Now your petitioners respectfully represent that latterly, in defiance of the laws of Louisiana, as above set forth, and to the great injury and vexation of petitioners and the other free persons of color of this city, a large number of free persons of color have been arrested in the public streets, while peaceably pursuing their private business, and thrust into prison without any legal cause whatever, but upon the frivolous, vexatious and unjust pretext that they had not with them, and upon their persons, free papers or documents proving them to be free: which papers are in no case necessary, as petitioners are by law presumed to be free, and in many cases cannot be had even if necessary, since many of them have been free for several generations.

Your petitioners further respectfully represent that Major J. M. BELL, while acting as Provost Judge in this city, recognized the legal rights of the class to which your petitioners belong, in the case of HENRY DOMINIQUE.

Wherefore your petitioners pray your Excellency for relief in the premises, and that such order shall be made as will cause their rights and the legal presumption established in their favor to be respected, and that henceforth they may be delivered from vexatious and illegal arrest and confinement, and directions issued to the police and all in authority to respect the presumption of law in favor of their freedom, and to make no arrests except in cases of violation of law and as in the case of other citizens.

UNION MEETINGS.

In spite of these depressing influences, which have so suddenly come upon them, the Unionists of New-Orleans have not lost heart, but bear up with apparently stouter zeal under each fresh discouragement. Union meetings are frequently held, in which the boldest sentiments of loyalty are fearlessly uttered.

A large one was recently held in the Third District, at the Recorder's Court, at which the venerable ANTHONY FERNANDEZ spoke. This noble-hearted old patriot can go back to the days of ANDREW JACKSON, by whom he was known and respected. He is not only a life-long resident of this State, but was a large slaveowner at the commencement of the war. When such as he are found standing nobly by the flag of their fathers, ignoring all other issues, and forfeiting all worldly personal interests, surely their opinions are entitled to the deepest reverence. Col. T. B. THORPE was the other speaker of note, and addressed the audience in his usual forcible and felicitous manner.

OUR PORT ROYAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The First Expedition up the Ogeechee—The Montauk Under Fire—The Amount of Damage Sustained.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PORT ROYAL, Thursday, Jan. 29, 1863.

When I last wrote I was hoping to send you word by this mail of the return and complete success of the expedition, led by the Monitor Montauk, to cut out the steamer Nashville from her place of refuge in the Ogeechee River, under the guns of a rebel fortification. But there are always delays in the carrying out of any plan, which no amount of foresight can prevent—difficulties which reveal themselves plumply in the way when the last stroke of preparation is supposed to have been given—and therefore, in this case, the work which we believed would be done last Tuesday was postponed, and probably will be performed to-day.

Meanwhile we have received communications from the expedition of a character which will interest you to hear, respecting a reconnoissance which the Montauk made to a point as near the rebel works as the obstructions in the river would admit—about a mile and a quarter distant from the battery—where she received a fire which proved her iron sides to be as invulnerable to solid shot as were those of the last Monitor in her action with the Merrimac last March. Thirteen ponderous missiles struck the vessel's turret and deck, doing as much damage as the pattering of as many rain-drops. With this experience, there need be no fear of the ultimate result.

With the hope of being an eye-witness of this little affair, I went on board the steamer Matlano on Tuesday morning, with Col. BARTOW, Commandant of Fort Pulaski, and several officers of the garrison, who desired to witness the scene of operations. Our route from the Savannah River to Ossebaw Sound lay for twenty miles through the marshes, sedge grown, and of wide expanse, which, with their labyrinth of bayous, form the distinctive features of this region of country. It requires a good pilot to thread a boat through these winding, dividing and wayward watercourses, which are singularly deep, but barely broad enough to float upon; for tall grass rustles against the sides of the vessel at almost every foot of the way, and our man soon found himself confused. He lost his clue somewhere in the Romney marshes—a very paradise, by the by, for game, such as curlew, ducks and snipe—and after a great deal of bother in turning the boat around, we managed to get into the channel again. It was then too late to continue our bungling way toward the Ossebaw, and if there be any imperfectness in the following account, which comes second-hand, censure the pilot, of whom, however, it is but just to say that he only made moderate professions of his ability to take us through safely before we set out.

To the officers of the navy tugboat Daffodil I am indebted for the particulars of the operations of the day, and as they participated to some extent in what took place, and observed everything closely, what they say, of course, should be believed.

The Ogeechee River is somewhat wider than most of the streams hereabout, leaving a channel way of 150 yards in width, but in general features it bears a close resemblance to the smaller streams, being marsh-bound and trending sharply around frequent elbows. Here and there, at some distance from its banks, are ridges and clumps of harder ground, where groups of pines stand boldly up like islands in the marshes. The river, with all its twistings, takes a N. N. W. course from Ossebaw Sound, and at about ten miles in a direct line from its mouth, as nearly as I can ascertain, is crossed by the Florida and Savannah Railroad, at which point the Nashville penetrated last Fall, and delivered her cargo of arms to the rebels. Since that time she has been fitted out as a privateer, and our naval officers who have had the important duty of preventing her exit imposed upon them, have been kept upon the tenter-hooks of restlessness and anxiety lest she should give them the slip. Through the Ogeechee, also, a very good route was afforded for the advance of a land force upon Savannah, and to defend this approach, the strong casemated work to which I have before alluded, has been constructed upon an elevated piece of ground known as Genesis Point, about midway between the mouth of the river and the railroad, on the southern bank. To cause a rebel exodus from this position on Genesis Point, or Fort McALLISTER, as it is called, and to destroy or capture the Nashville, is the mission of the Montauk, under the planning of Admiral DUPONT.

Knowing, from information brought by deserters and "intelligent contrabands," that a line of obstructions and torpedoes had been placed across the river below the fortifications, Commander WORDEN on Tuesday morning ascended the river in the Montauk to reconnoitre. He was followed, at a respectful distance, by the gunboats Seneca, Wissahickon and Dawn, and the armed tug Daffodil towing the mortar-schooner C. P. Williams. Penetrating to the line of obstructions, Commander WORDEN found them to consist of a line of squared logs driven into the river from bank to bank, beyond which it was impossible to advance. Having reached this place the fort opened its fire, and the first shot came plumply against the Montauk's turret, rebounding harmlessly into the water. The consternation of the rebels at seeing this little nondescript craft approach—at feeling that their doom was nearing them—did not apparently unstring their nerves or disable them from accurate aiming, as twelve additional shots besides the well-aimed first one, struck the vessel before Commander WORDEN had completed his reconnoissance. The garrison had doubtless been practicing at the precise range where the Montauk stationed herself, and obtained the distance perfectly.

Bringing his vessel to an anchor, Commander WORDEN returned his compliments from his mammoth 15-inch and scarcely less formidable 11-inch gun, and did not waste many shots in experiments before he was able to drop them apparently with precision into the fort. After blazing away at intervals during the four or five hours that he remained at anchor, and dismounting, it is believed, three of the enemy's guns, meanwhile taking a thorough and leisurely survey of the obstructions in front of him, as well as of the Nashville, about four miles further up the stream, Commander WORDEN returned to the other vessels of the expedition which had been amusing themselves, also, in sending an occasional shot in the direction of the fort over an intervening piece of woods, expressing himself as being fully satisfied with the information and experience which the little affair had afforded.

The next time he goes up it is hoped that this game of long-taw will not be necessary. He demonstrated that no missiles which the enemy possess can penetrate his iron armor, and that his guns can be served more rapidly, and without injury to his crew, than was anticipated. No remarkable difficulty was experienced from the concussion to those within the turret, and not a nail was started, nor a joint in the wood-work of the hull opened, by the force of the heavy solid shot which struck the vessel. The crew, I am told, are perfectly enthusiastic over the fighting qualities of their noble craft, and will feel confident of immunity from danger at the closest quarters. Indeed, the most effective fighting which these ironclads can perform must be done at close quarters, and therefore it was that Commander WORDEN withdrew, after making this reconnoissance, in order to economise ammunition. From an officer who visited the Montauk after she had been in action, I am told that the indentations made by the shot upon her plating, are very slight. As the balls struck her deck they would glance off, leaving a groove-like mark a foot or eighteen inches long, which, instead of weakening the iron, made it more compact and strong. While the vessel was engaged nothing could be seen of her hull below the marsh grass,—her position to those on board the other vessels being revealed alone by the two National flags which she carried into action, one at the bow and the other at the stern, and the former was nearly shot away by the fire from the fort. Her deck, after the fight, had very much the appearance of that of a mud scow, being covered with clots of black mud, which were thrown upon it by the plunging fire from the battery.

It may happen that the ram Fingal will go from Savannah through St. Augustine creek to the Ogeechee and assist the shore battery, in which case it is to be presumed that the Montauk will have a formidable opponent to come with, if the recent rebel boastings of the Fingal's power are to be credited. But I have no doubt even then of what will be the result of the conflict.

To-day we have heard heavy firing from the southward, and supposing it to come from the contestants on the Ogeechee there is considerable anxiety to hear the news. As, however, the steamer Circassian, which is to bring this, is announced to leave here this afternoon, I am compelled to send an incomplete account.

The weather for the past few days has been remarkably cold. The thermometer this morning was at 28 degrees, and ice an inch deep formed in exposed locations. The climate seems to be gradually adapting itself to the constitutions of the present occupants of the soil, and as a consequence a sick soldier is a rarity.

Capture of Rebel Prisoners—A Detachment of our Troops Ambuscaded above Yorktown, &c.

YORKTOWN, Monday, Feb. 9.

During last week, a number of rebels have been taken prisoners, and others have deserted and come within our lines at this place. Last Saturday, five rebel deserters came in, and reported sixteen others awaiting an opportunity to come in. Maj. KLINE ordered out Capt. FAUTH, Company M, Fifth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and Capt. HAGERMASTER, Company L, Lieuts. WILLIAMS and GEORGE SMITH, volunteered and accompanied the expedition. They reached the six mile ordinary without any opposition or discovering the sixteen secesh desirous of joining them. The enemy's picket, stationed here, retired before them, and Capt. FAUTH, without orders, pushed forward after them. Just this side of the nine mile ordinary, he, with his command, was drawn into an ambuscade and fired upon. He was brought off, supposed to be mortally wounded. Capt. HAGERMASTER upon whom the command devolved, fought like a hero. He charged upon and broke through the rebel line, but got separated from his men and taken prisoner. Lieuts. WILLIAMS, SMITH and LITTLE were taken prisoners, and Lieut. RHINEMULLER was seen to fall from his horse. It is supposed he was killed. Our entire loss was 30 killed, wounded and missing. The enemy's loss is unknown. The enemy is reported in some force at Burnt Ordinary, twelve miles from Williamsburgh.

An Inquiry Based on the Mediation Rumors.

A NEW POLITICAL MOVEMENT.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 10.

MR. SHERMAN'S FINANCE BILL.

In the Senate, Mr. SHERMAN's Bank bill was the special order, and consumed the greater part of the day. Mr. SHERMAN made a very able argument in its support. To-morrow Mr. HENDERSON's Missouri Emancipation bill is the special order, with the agreement to vote after an hour's debate, but the Bank bill may override it.

RUMORS OF MEDIATION.

Current rumors of a correspondence between the Secretary of State and the French Government, looking to mediation or arbitration, induced Senator FOSTER to-day, after conference with a large number of Senators, to introduce the following:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to lay before the Senate any correspondence which has taken place between this Government and the Government of France, on the subject of mediation, arbitration, or other measures, looking to a termination of the existing civil war.

THE NEW-ORLEANS ELECTION CASES.

The time of the House to-day was mostly occupied in the discussion of the right to seats of Messrs. FLANDERS and HAHN, claiming from the New-Orleans Districts. The report of the Committee on Elections is favorable to their claims, but it is very doubtful if the House will adopt it. The Democrats—wiser in their generation than the Children of Light—will go solid in opposition, and may possibly carry enough straggling Republicans to defeat the report. Such, at least, seems a likely enough result, judging from action of such men as Mr. BINGHAM, of Ohio, who to-day made a labored speech against it.

THE PAPER DUTY.

A meeting of newspaper publishers was held this morning, and after a general Conference upon the subject of repealing the tax upon foreign paper, a resolution was adopted for a reduction of the duty to five cents. It was also decided this evening that all newspaper men now here should call upon the Committees of both Houses, and urge the adoption of the resolutions. Col. FORNEY was authorized to make the arrangements, and fix the time for meeting the two Committees. Wednesday afternoon will probably be set apart for that purpose.

REORGANIZING THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

The important bill prepared by Postmaster-General BLAIR, to reorganize the Post-office Department, was passed this morning, through the efforts of Senator COLLAMER.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Senator MCDOUGALL to-day reported the Pacific Railroad bill, with amendments, which have already appeared in the TIMES. It will be considered as soon as the financial measures are disposed of.

POLITICAL MOVEMENTS.

THURLOW WEED to-day had a secluded and prolonged interview with the President and Secretary of War. It is said he was summoned here to aid in the construction of a new Union party, to take the place of the present Republican organization, and that Gov. CURTAIN, on the new platform, will be renominated for Governor of Pennsylvania.

THE COASTWISE TELEGRAPH.

The Senate Military Committee will consider to-morrow morning the House bill providing for a telegraph cable coastwise to New-Orleans. The Committee will hardly act upon it this session, owing to the press of other important measures.

ADDITIONAL GENERALS.

The Senate Military Committee, at their meeting to-day, authorized the Chairman to report a bill for the appointment of thirty additional Major and seventy Brigadier-Generals. It is understood that selections will be made from the fifty Major and one hundred and fifty Brigadier-Generals now before the committee for confirmation.

THE PROPOSED ARMORY AT WEEHAWKEN.

The Secretary of War has addressed a letter to the Senate Military Committee, urging immediate action on the bill before them for the purchase of a site for an armory and military depot at Weehawken.

THE M'DOWELL CASE.

The McDowell Court of Inquiry, to-day, immediately after the reading of the Journal, went into secret session for deliberation, on coming out of which, at about 4 o'clock, it adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning. A decision in the case is expected at a very early say.

ILLNESS OF SENATOR HALE.

Hon. JNO. P. HALE has for some days been dangerously ill of erysipelas, but is now considered out of danger.

NOMINATIONS.

The President to-day sent the following nominations to the Senate:

To be Paymasters, with the rank of Major—JAS. R. LOFFLAND, Delaware; HIRAM S. SLEEPER and DANIEL M. ADAMS, Kansas; T. H. STANTON, Iowa.

Subsistence Department—JOS. P. LONGSHAD, Pennsylvania.

To be Quartermaster—First Lieut. GEO. U. MEADE, New-York.

RUNNING THE VICKSBURGH BLOCKADE.

The feeling at the War Department, over the achievement of one of our rams, in running the Vicksburgh blockade, has been unusually jubilant. The advantage thus gained is deemed of more significance and importance than the public have yet accorded it. If we are to await the slow process of digging out the hard pan bed of the canal, it is of the first consequence that the lower end of the cut-off, as well as the upper, should lie under the guns of our armed vessels on the river.

SEIZURE OF CONTRABAND GOODS.

A portion of Col. BAKER's Detective Corps last night seized 168 cases of boots and shoes, in transition across the Potomac from Leonardstown, Md., destined for the South. The goods and smugglers were sent to Washington. That much contraband trade is still carried on there is no doubt, notwithstanding the frequent arrests of the parties engaged in it.

SHE SALES OF CONDEMNED VESSELS.

The Secretary of the Treasury has, in response to an inquiry, transmitted a statement from the Collector of New-York, of the sales of vessels condemned and sold under the acts of the 13th of July, 1862. They are the schooners Genoa, Mary C. Hopkins, W. H. Raritan, Claremont, Sunny South, Mobile and Virginia, the bark Bounding Billow, the brigs Mary McRae, Gen. Bailey and Fanny, and ships John Cottle, Liberty and Sebastian Cabot. The amount of sales was $7,410, of which the United States receive $1,754.

THE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The House Committee on Agriculture have prepared a bill more particularly to define the duties and goods of officers of the Agricultural Department. It authorizes the appointment, in addition to a Chief Clerk, a Botanist, Chemist and Automologist, at a salary of $2,000 each; a Disbursing Clerk and Chief of Statistics, at $1,800 each; a Translator and Draughtsman, at $1,400 each, and six clerks at $1,200 each.

LIEUT. WORDEN'S OPERATIONS.

From what is said here in well-informed circles, Capt. WORDEN's object in proceeding to Fort McALLISTER with the Montauk was not with a view to reduce that work, but merely to test the effect of the shot upon the turret of his vessel, and upon which the rebels' steel-pointed shot had no injurious effect. His proceeding to that quarter to demolish the rebel work, &c., was not specified in the original programme.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

THE RUGGLES CANAL BILL—THE MISSOURI EMANCIPATION BILL—SECTIONALISM OF CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Feb. 8, 1863.

The supremest danger to our country is to be perceived in the spirit of its public men. At this crisis, when all legislation should be dictated by national policy, the large, unselfish statemanship of other days has yielded to the timid and jealous methods of contending sections. We have as much to fear from localism as from faction.

Yesterday, a field-day in both the House and Senate, painfully illustrated this statement. In fact, its truth develops in geometrical ratio with the progress of the present session. The debate, in the House, was on the bill to construct a ship canal from the Mississippi to the Lakes, and to proportionally enlarge the locks of the Erie and Oswego Canals. What was the nature of this debate? The merits and demerits of the great project as a military measure are fully set before the public, and before Congress. Of the effect on the social and commercial relations, and inter-relations, of the East and the West of thus opening a "new Mississippi" from the latter to the Atlantic, no one can pretend uncertainty. But putting aside the merits of the question, what is the nature of this prolonged debate on a measure surely involving vast national results, whether for good or evil.

On the part of those opposing the bill, it has certainly been conducted with the most open avowals of action for the selfish, local interests of the sections whence they come.

The Pennsylvanians all oppose it, for fear that New-York may derive new power and advantage from its passage. New-Jersey is governed by a railroad, and therefore against water as a means of commercial intercourse. Southern Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, oppose it, because it may direct business from their thoroughfares, and while it gives more generous facilities to the great Northwest, and to the importance of the seaboard commercial points. Observing these jealousies at work, VALLANDIGHAM and others, who oppose it because they wish the West to secede from the East, skillfully attune and play upon them, until the whole House rings with a jangling of discordant, sectional, unpatriotic voices.

How disheartening that men who nobly scorn and combat the intrigues of the anti-war faction, when the latter appears in its naked, untempting guise, should daily with its leaders when they put on the garb of local protection; should allow their vanity, love of power, sectionalism, each to be handled, in its turn, to the overthrowing of that sensitiveness to national good and evil, which is the first quality of patriots.

On the day when Mr. VALLANDIGHAM made his Anti-Eastern speech, one of the warmest supporters of the Government among Western men—a person who would not bow to VALLANDIGHAM in the street—used the following language: "That speech had a great deal of truth in it. I don't care if VALLANDIGHAM did make it. Let the East take care of herself. It is our turn now—we have the power, and shall legislate to suit ourselves." Even so good a fellow as POWERS, of Indiana, during yesterday's debate, was tempted into a hasty threat of what the West might do, or refuse to do, in case of legislation against its local demands.

Thus we transcend that wholesome opposition of State interests which produced an equilibrium in days of national childhood.

Take this objective view of the present Congress. Separate yourself from interest in pending measures. Look at the House with the impartial philosophy of the foreign Count in the gallery; (the author of a recent "Diary" not alluded to,) who rubs his eyeglasses like a curious student of national pathology. Through the Count's spectacles you will see that Congress, though broadly divided on two platforms of loyalty and faction, (and this is all that saves us,) is interlaced and subdivided by the interests of locality, as the land and water of the earth's surface are jointly divided by the isothermal zones.

The debate in the Senate, on the Missouri Emancipation bill, was prolonged far into Sunday morning, and increased in warmth. On this subject, it is New-England which is in danger of narrowing its view—of yielding too little to the necessities and prejudices of a sister State, striving to free herself from the curse which blights the nation, and uttering her petitions with dignity and moderation, through the mouth of one of her Senators, if with suspicious petulance in the speeches of the other.

The true ground for pausing long before extreme action on either of the foregoing measures, lies in the additional burdens which they impose upon the public credit. The cost of each will nearly double the entire actual expenses of this Government in the days of the younger ADAMS. But gratifying symptoms are apparent of such financial policy on the part of Congress as will sustain even these largesses. Every day the feeling in support of Mr. CHASE's National Currency proposition is more and more decided. I believe that it will be substantially adopted.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 10.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Rep.,) called up the bill reorganizing the Post-office Department, which passed.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) from the Military Committee, reported a bill to authorize an increase of Major and Brigadier-Generals in the Volunteer service.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) presented a petition from the colored citizens of New-Jersey protesting against any appropriation for colonization.

Mr. FOSTER, of Connecticut, (Rep.,) offered a resolution, which was adopted, requesting the President of the United States (if not incompatible with the public interests) to lay before the Senate any correspondence which has taken place between this Government and the Government of France on the subject of mediation, arbitration, or other measures looking to a termination of the existing civil war.

The National Currency bill was then taken up.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Rep.,) said this measure was proposed at the last session, but met with little attention. Since then it had received the most careful consideration from persons in all portions of the country, and especially from the Committees of the House and Senate. We were now in condition when something must be done to sustain the finances of the country. We were in the midst of war, and gold was at such a high premium that it was virtually drawn out of circulation; while the necessities of the Government require the use of a large amount of money already. Congress, at the last session, finding the Government without any money, authorized the issue of Government notes, but there were great objections to the continued and increased issue of this paper money. It produces an excessive inflation of the currency, and depreciates greatly the value of paper money. There is a great objection to this paper money on account of the facility for its excessive expansion. There is danger from this paper money of lavish and corrupt expenditures; danger of fraud in the management and supervision of it, and danger from it, owing to the impossibility of providing it in sufficient amounts for the wants of the people. When are the expenditures to be reduced to an equality with the revenue? At the time when the bill was offered in this House to increase the issue of this paper money, gold was at 136½; the next day it rose to 138, and within three days to 141, and in six days to 145½, and never suffered a decline until there was a disposition evinced in the Senate to check this new issue. That simple disposition to check this increased issue caused gold to fall three or four per cent. Another objection to this paper money is, that it is not redeemable or convertible, thus lacking the elements of a sound National currency. These notes are also made the basis of bank issues, and the increase of this local bank circulation is in precisely the same ratio of increase as that of United States notes. Something ought to be done to check this excessive issue of bank paper. He had a curious statement in a complaint of a proposed two per cent. tax sent to him from a bank in Pennsylvania. It shows that the capital stock was $200,000 while its circulation is $589,000. Its whole assets are not enough to pay their depositors and current debts, leaving the whole circulation secured by loans and discounts, and he feared that many banks of the country were in the same state. He thought he could prove that in time of war these local banks with their paper issue were inimical to the country. A privilege to issue this money in times of suspension of specie payments, is the same as a privilege to coin money—a privilege, which in times of war especially, should only be exercised by the State itself, and not by any private corporation. The great danger from this paper currency is from an over issue. All history has shown this. The French assignats were at first good, but by an over-issue they became worthless. Austrian paper money by over-issue, became so depreciated, that one thousand dollars was worth only one dollar in gold. The Continental money fell to about the same discount. If it had been restrained within its proper limits it might have continued good. This country will have to bear the issue of about four hundred millions of dollars of paper money and no more. The moment you go over that, you begin to bring ruin upon the country, and produce an immense inflation and the most wild speculation. This plan of National currency will be safer, far safer, than any other of paper money. It will have the credit of the United States, a deposit of one-fourth of the circulation, and the liability of stockholders to a certain extent. These bills will be convertible at any time into lawful money of the United States, and the currency will be uniform all over the country, so that a bill issued in Maine will be taken in California. Banks will be organized all over the country, and a demand will be made for the bonds of the Government, and a great market for the bonds made. There is no lack of capital. There is capital enough to carry on all the business of the country, and it is begging for investment. There is, however, a lack of confidence and a want of system. This system will furnish a convenient mode for the collection of taxes all over the country, these notes being receivable for taxes everywhere. He believed this system would be beneficial to the banks. It would tend greatly to prevent counterfeiting, now so prevalent. The notes of twelve hundred banks have been counterfeited or altered; over three thousand have been altered. There are seventeen hundred spurious kinds of notes, and four hundred and sixty varieties of imitations. The number of banks in 1862 was estimated at fifteen hundred, and the notes of all were counterfeited except two hundred and fifty-three. The alterations were 3,039, and the spurious bills 1,685. This system would tend to prevent all this. The banks will have the benefit of being depositaries of the Government. This will also tend to promote nationality by nationalizing the currency of the country and binding together the whole country. He referred to the cases of the Bank of England, and the Bank of France, and claimed that it was necessary for a Government in order to borrow large amounts from the people to have some agency of this kind, and these banks which he had referred to had always been a great support to the Government in times of war and trouble. If we place our finances in a healthy and sound condition, we may be able to carry on the war, and to provide for the payment of the public debt. But if we continue this over-issue of paper money without any limit, the result cannot but be universal financial ruin. He did not take so gloomy a view of our financial condition as many did. Indeed, as compared with other modern nations carrying on large wars our financial condition was wonderfully good. Even at the very commencement of the war between England and France, the English three per cents. fell to 51 and then to 45, and ruin seemed to be staring every one in the face. A state of things existed far worse than anything we have seen. But that people did not stop. They persevered to the end. And French securities at one time were worth actually nothing, yet that great people went on until the genius of NAPOLEON and the sun of Austerlitz restored the finances of the Government. He wished above all things to establish a sound financial system as a prominent means of preserving our nationality; and one great means of preserving our National life is the establishment of a sound National currency.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine (Rep.) by consent from the Committee on Finance, reported back the bill to prevent and punish frauds on the revenue with amendments. He also introduced a bill to allow the United States to prosecute appeals and writs of error without giving security.

The Senate then resumed the consideration of the currency bill, the question being on Mr. POWELL's amendment requiring Banks to keep specie in their vaults to the amount of one fourth of their circulation.

This amendment was rejected by Yeas 14, Nays 22.

Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) moved to strike out the provision excluding these notes from being received in payment of imports. He claimed that the Government should receive the same notes that it forces the people to take.

This motion was also rejected by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Davis, Dixon, Foot, Kennedy, Powell, Richardson, Turpie, Wall—9.

NAYS—37.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.,) moved to amend so as to require that thirty per cent. of the capital stock shall be paid in in gold or silver coin.

This amendment was rejected by Yeas 19, Nays 21.

Mr. POWELL offered an amendment, requiring the assent of the States to the organization of these banks. Rejected.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Missouri, (Union,) offered an amendment, increasing the amount of capital stock of these banks. He feared the establishment of a large number of small banks, located in inaccessible places. He was willing to do all he could to aid the Government. He was willing to vote for measures which he might consider of doubtful constitutionality. But he thought the future would show the necessity of this amendment.

Rejected—Yeas, 16; Nays, 31.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 10.

On motion of Mr. ARNOLD, of Illinois, (Rep.,) the Committee of Ways and Means was instructed to examine and report on the practical operation of the Excise Law upon the interests of manufacturers of limited means.

The House resumed the consideration of the joint resolution for the adjustment of the equitable claims of contractors for naval supplies, and to regulate contracts for the Navy Department. It refers to those who, during the year ending June, 1862, have furnished more than 50 per centum above the quantities specified in their contracts, and without default therein.

After debate, the resolution was recommitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The House resumed the consideration of the report of the Committee on Elections, in favor of admitting Messrs. FLANDERS and HAHN as representatives from Louisiana.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, (Union,) said if the Union was restored, as he had no doubt it would be, it would be through the instrumentality of Union men in the Southern States; men who maintained their allegiance under the most discouraging and distressing circumstances, languishing in prisons because they refused to support the rebel authorities while others were deserting by thousands, taking refuge within our lines, and were true to their oaths of allegiance. He was surprised at the legal position taken yesterday by Mr. VOORHEES, which would deprive the people of their right to be represented in the law-making body, and subject them to the control of a satrap and to all the rigors of military rule.

The forms of election were strictly observed, and the contest was fairly conducted. This was not disputed. They could not go behind the election; and inquire by what tenure Gen. SHEPLEY held his commission as Military Governor. Messrs. FLANDERS and HAHN came here as the representatives of the people, and this was the only question to be determined. He asked the gentlemen to consider the meaning of that plain provision of the Constitution, that the United States shall guarantee to every State a republican form of Government. In other words, no State should be deprived of it by domestic insurrection, foreign invasion, or the action of the people. It was a guarantee that no State should set up a form of Government anti-republican in form, and antagonistic to the United States. There was a mutual guarantee to every State of a republican Government. Upon this principle, he justified the appointment of Military Governors, and the power of the President to organize the necessary machinery for the purpose of representation—the characteristic of a republican Government.

Mr. POLAND, of Indiana, (Rep.,) said no more appeals to their sympathies ought to divert the gentlemen from the provisions of the Constitution. If there was anything against which the framers of that instrument guarded, it was Executive encroachment. Copied from the British Constitution, ours provided that the times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives in the State should be prescribed by the State or the Legislature thereof; but Congress might make or alter the law. He was unwilling for any trifling advantage to throw away the privileges of the Constitution. The only way, under the present circumstances, that Louisiana could send Representatives hither, was by an act of Congress, fixing the time, place and manner of holding the election therein. The Military Commandant, dubbed with the name of Governor, deriving no authority under the Constitution of Louisiana, and by virtue of his office merely a part of the executive authority of the United States, had no right to issue his proclamation for an election, the Constitution and laws of that State remaining in force, though there was no power to execute them. Although it was said that this was a free election, he thought he could detect in it the force of coercion. The proclamation of Gen. SHEPLEY expressly mentioned, as an inducement to an election, the enjoyment of the benefits secured by the proclamation of the President. At that time, too, the iron hand of military authority was felt in that State, where the United States had jurisdiction.

Mr. ELIOT, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) had no doubt that the election was fair and free, and that the gentlemen coming here were worthy and true representatives of loyal men. But there was a question beyond this. On the day of the election there was no authority under the State of Louisiana to give vitality to the election for Representatives. The power of the Military Governor must be limited, and his appointment justified by necessity. The restoration of civil government must precede the time when the election was held; for no Military Governor, appointed by Executive authority, had power under the Constitution to issue writs of election.

Mr. NOBLE, of Missouri, (Union,) said our army was sent to Louisiana to restore the national authority and its relations to the General Government. There was no more proper way to produce this result than to introduce on this floor Representatives from that State. He justified the proclamation of Gen. SHEPLEY in the premises.

Mr. BINGHAM, of Ohio, (Rep.,) was not willing to concede that the Constitution, in time of war, was not sufficient for the common defence and the support of the rights of all people in every section of the Union. He differed from the conclusions of the Committee on Elections, and contended that no Representatives could be elected, except by State or Federal legislation, basing his argument on constitutional law. He hoped the Committee would report a bill specially providing for an election of Representatives in cases such as were pending. This would deprive this question of its embarrassment.

No question was taken.

Necessary Reforms in the Army—Valuable Suggestions.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, CAMP NEAR FALMOUTH, Va., Jan. 31, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: The following suggestions are offered for publication in your journal, which, I believe, has the welfare of the country sincerely at heart. They are designed for the perusal and consideration of the heads of the nation. Perhaps a little sound disinterested advice from one who has observed and reflected much, may be a refreshing novelty to those who have the management and direction of our armies. Time, at least, will vindicate their justice to an anxious and discouraged people.

1. Since the President has at last commenced purging the army of insubordinate officers, by approving the decision in the case of FITZ-JOHN PORTER, which seems warranted by the evidence as reviewed by Judge Advocate-General HOLT, let him continue this course by approving the sentences of all who are convicted by competent Courts-martial, either of desertion or other serious offences against the articles of war.

The Executive "clemency," which has uniformly defeated every attempt to introduce a substantial discipline here, pardoning all deserters, and restoring the most worthless officers, after the troops had been released from even the form of respect for them, should no longer go behind the sentence of the approving General, unless under the most imperative necessity. JEFF. DAVIS does not thus play fast and loose with his army. Fas est ab hoste doceri; and if the country expects to have an army, and it is desirable to have that army efficient, let it be regulated with military rigor, and it may accomplish military results.

2. The ineffective and incompetent major and brigadier-generals, including almost every one from civil life, without military experience, should be immediately mustered out, and the requisite number appointed from the line of the army. This would furnish at once an incentive and reward for meritorious services. These veterans will not yield their confidence or respect to generals who have not earned it in battle.

The heights at Fredericksburgh, opposite SUMNER, could have been carried with the proper exertions on the part of General officers, not one of whom (excepting one who was wounded) accompanied the column more than two hundred yards out of the streets of the city. The history of that day has not yet been written, and those who would understand the particulars of that field and failure, must inquire lower down than of the Brigadiers. The rank and file were capable of any achievement there, but the details of the attack were wretchedly mismanaged, whatever the spectators on the opposite bank may have written to the contrary.

However, officers are getting tired of exposing their lives in desperate enterprises, to find a Busteed or an Ullman placed over them when the smoke clears off.

3. Some steps should be taken in due time (i. e., immediately) in regard to the two years' and other troops whose terms expire in May and June next.

If these troops are not to be used this Winter, economy would seem to dictate their being discharged at once, especially as after that many of them may be disposed to reënlist by the time operations can be resumed in the Spring.

As these regiments contain many of the very best soldiers in the army, it is, of course, desirable to retain them in the service. I do not pause to consider their forcible retention, since besides involving a breach of the faith of the Government and the violation of the contract of enlistment, such a course would, I verily believe, be found impossible of enforcement, besides destroying the best qualities of the men themselves.

One practicable way, however, is to offer the men a furlough of thirty days, at the most convenient period between now and then, as a condition of their reënlistment for a period coterminous with the other volunteer troops in the field, together with the additional reënlistment pay, and the bounties paid to the other troops. They can be consolidated or recruited up, the preference being given in consolidating to the oldest regiment, whose colors and number should be retained; the surplus officers, after careful selection, to be mustered out.

I know that a furlough is an indispensable prerequisite to the reënlistment of a single man. These old regiments also contain many of the most valuable officers in the service, and these should be induced to remain if the men cannot. All plans for the purpose, however, will fail when the avenues to promotion are kept steadily open for the deserving. Since light field artillery is now effective at 1,600 yards, instead of 600 and musketry at 1,000, instead of 300, storming positions is not what it used to be; the casualties among officers especially is unprecedented.

If the proper inducements are offered to these officers, a selection should be made of the best of them, and vacancies, as they occur, supplied from them by the War Department, in the volunteer forces, the authority to do which should, pro hoc vice, be resumed from the Governors of States. A proper roster should be made up by the Government for this purpose, and the vacancies filled according to rank.

These suggestions, of course, require a bold policy on the part of men who should be masters of the situation. Upon any others, all advice, good, bad and indifferent, will alike be thrown away.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

A DISASTER AT SEA.

The Steamer Ella Warley Sunk by the North Star.

SIX LIVES LOST.

Conflicting Statements as to the Cause of the Disaster.

The steamship North Star, (United States transport,) Capt. LEFEVAR, from New-Orleans Jan. 30, via Key West on the 4th inst., with passengers, to United States Quartermaster, arrived at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. She reports that last night, when off the Woodlands, (near Sandy Hook,) she came in collision with the steamship Ella Warley, hence for New-Orleans, striking her forward of the wheel on the starboard side, crushing in the boilers, and sinking her in twenty minutes. Her first Assistant Engineer, two firemen, two coal-passers and a boy, were lost, who, it is supposed, were scalded to death. The passengers and crew were rescued by the boats, and brought back to this City.

The Ella Warley was formerly the Isabel. She was built in Baltimore in 1848, and was 1,115 tons—side lever engine. She formerly ran between Charleston and Havana. On the breaking out of the rebellion, she made several successful trips between Nassau and Charleston, and was eventually captured by the steamship Santiago de Cuba, and brought to this port, where she was purchased by TAUSILLO & VIDIRO, of this City.

The following additional particulars regarding the collision one of our reporters has obtained from officers on board the North Star and Ella Warley:

STATEMENT OF THE ACTING PURSER OF THE NORTH STAR.

Mr. MCHENRY, Acting Purser of the North Star, says: "Between 8 and 9 o'clock on Monday night last, we were steering our course for the light ship off Sandy Hook, and were about ten miles distant from it when we made out the light of a steamer, about two miles ahead of us, which subsequently proved to be the Ella Warley, outward bound. As the vessels neared each other, being distant about two hundred and fifty yards, the Ella Warley altered her course, putting her helm hard a-starboard. Capt. LEFEVAR, of the North Star, perceiving this unaccountable movement on the part of the Ella Warley, stopped his ship, and was backing his engines as strongly as possible when the Ella Warley struck her fairly on the cut-water, the collision taking effect on that vessel amidships, just forward of her wheel-house, the North Star continuing to make all possible retrograde speed, by backing her engines. The moment the collision took place, Capt. LEFEVAR ordered all his boats to be lowered, and to proceed at once to the assistance of the passengers on board the Ella Warley, giving the officers in charge of the boats explicit directions to rescue the women and children first. All the passengers and crew of that vessel were brought safely on board the North Star, excepting one assistant engineer, and five or six firemen, who are supposed to be lost. The rescued passengers were comfortably placed in the saloon of Capt. LEFEVAR's vessel, and properly cared for until their arrival in New-York. Several females on board the Ella Warley, (being in bed at the time of the collision,) came on board the North Star in their night clothing, all of them, as may naturally be supposed, in the greatest state of fright and consternation. A subscription was immediately set on foot, and the officers and passengers of the North Star soon raised a sufficient sum to purchase clothing for such of the ladies as needed it. The Ella Warley went down in twenty minutes after the collision, and now lies in seven fathoms water. The North Star remained in the vicinity for some time, endeavoring to find the missing engineer and firemen, but was unable to do so.

Among the passengers from Key West were Capt. T. H. WALSH and Mr. CUNNINGHAM, his First Officer, of the ship Sparkling Sea, recently wrecked on the Bahamas; also, Capts. COFFIN and DENNISON, U. S. N., all of whom were on deck at the time of the collision, and agree in saying that the altering of her course by the sunken ship was the cause of the collision, and that such action, on her part, is one of the most unaccountable circumstances in their seafaring experience. Capt. LEFEVAR says it would have been impossible for the North Star or any other vessel to have avoided the collision, even in broad daylight, considering the fact that the Ella Warley altered her course so unaccountably and within so short a distance.

The stem of the North Star is considerably damaged, and the cut-water almost entirely torn away. She is now lying at Pier No. 29 North River, and leaks badly; but is kept free from water by the constant use of her powerful steam pumps. As soon as her cargo is discharged she will be taken to the dry-dock for repairs. She is owned by "Commodore" VANDERBILT, and commanded by Capt. P. E. LEFEVRE, (formerly Commander of the steamer Vanderbilt,) one of the best experienced and most skillful navigators sailing from this port.

Capt. SCHENCK, formerly of the steamship Alabama, plying between New-York and Savannah, was in command of the Ella Warley.

STATEMENT OF MR. H. B. BARSTOW, PURSER OF THE ELLA WARLEY.

Just previous to the collision, Mr. BARSTOW says that Mr. REYNOLDS, one of the owners of the vessel, a Mr. HYER, passenger, and himself, were in the Purser's room asleep. The first intimation they had of any danger, was the ringing of the engine-room bell to stop and back the steamer; then, in a few minutes came the crash of the collision, the North Star cutting through the starboard side of the Warley, just forward of the wheel-house, and through into the engine room, knocking off the boiler on that side.

Mr. BARSTOW, immediately after this, heard Capt. SCHENCK calling out, "What ship is that?" to which he heard no answer. Mr. BARSTOW immediately put on his pantaloons, and went on deck. The steam was at this time rushing up the gangway so thickly that nothing could be distinctly discerned. When he got on deck he went to the starboard rail, and discovered the vessel was in a sinking condition, and that several of the passengers and crew were endeavoring to lower the boats. Having lowered them the seamen commenced filling them. At the same time the mate and several of the passengers were at work lowering the boats on the larboard side. The women and children, of whom there were eighteen on board, now commenced coming up from the cabin, on the starboard side. Mr. BARROW having by this time got into the nearest boat alongside the ship, took them into it, and passed them to the outer boat, while others were filling the forward part of the boat which he occupied. The women and children being on board the boats, Capt. SCHENCK was heard at the cabin door, crying out to know if the women and children were safe, and if there was anybody yet in the cabin. Mr. REYNOLDS went to him, and assured him that all were in the boats, and then helped him (he being bruised and soaked through to the skin, by falling through the opening made by the collision) to get in also. The outside boat had left for the North Star, and Mr. B.'s boat (the last one to leave the wreck) then proceeded to do the same. The North Star was then about 250 yards distant. After proceeding a short distance they met two of that vessel's boats coming toward them. One of them took Mr. B.'s boat in tow, and Mr. HAZARD's boat (the first mate) took the other one, and all made for the steamer. Mr. HAZARD, after placing his passengers on board the North Star, returned again to the Warley, rowed around her, hailed to know if there was any one still on the wreck or in the water, and having received no answer, he returned to the steamer. From the time of the collision till the decks of the Warley were level with the water was only ten minutes. The passengers, officers and crew lost everything, the first object of all appearing to be to save the lives of the women and children.

In the last boat which left the Warley, were the Captain, Second Mate, one of the Engineers, the Steward, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. HYER, and others of the passengers and crew. The statement that the Captain, or any of the officers, were drunk at the time of the collision, we believe has not the slightest foundation in truth.

The Warley was owned by Messrs. F. W. REYNOLDS & Co., of Providence, R. I., and was bound to New-Orleans with freight and passengers.

She had a cargo of dry goods, provisions, leather, hay, and a large amount of express matter. Adams Express Company had one safe containing $5,000, and a passenger had in his possession $8,000 in gold. Her cargo is valued at $175,000.

Mr. HAZARD, the Chief Mate of the Warley, gives an altogether different version of the cause of the collision from that given by the Purser of the North Star. He says that the latter vessel was heading northwest, when her course should have been nearly due north, thus crossing the direct sailing line of the Warley, and rendering a collision liable. The Warley accordingly changed her course a few points to the westward, in order to allow the North Star to go by without danger, when that vessel sheered up westwardly; and as the Warley continued to veer off, the North Star apparently followed the same tack, which course she pursued until the collision took place. He represents, also, that the blow from the North Star took the Warley at a right angle, and not a quartering stroke, as is represented by others. The allegation that the pilot of the North Star took the lights of the Warley to be those of the light-ship, may, however, account for the alleged veering course of the first mentioned vessel.

Those of the Warley's crew whom it is now generally conceded are lost are as follows:

Henry A. Boyd, First Assistant Engineer.
John Jones, fireman.
Andrew Gordon, fireman.
Patrick Hayes, coal passer.
James Ryans, coal passer.
Hugh Scott, mess boy.

DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST.

Arrest of an Officer for Extortion—A Man Swindled out of $3,000—Apprehension of the Party by Provost-Marshal General Draper.

A case has recently been brought to light which reveals the infamous practice resorted to by a military officer to impose upon an unsuspecting and confiding person placed temporarily in his custody. Through the active exertions of Gen. DRAPER and his assistants, one of the guilty party implicated in the base act has been arrested, and is now in close confinement.

According to the facts so stated, about four weeks ago a man named NEUBRIX, a German, who was formerly engaged in business at Mobile, La., deemed it expedient, on account of his being suspected of inclining toward Union sentiments, to dispose of his personal and other property and come North. He realized from the sale of his effects the amount of $8,000, in bills of exchange, specie and Southern bank bills. Upon reaching Baltimore he attracted the attention of the authorities, and while attempting to take passage on the Baltimore and Ohio cars, was arrested by a Provost-Guard of that company and taken before Major CONSTABLE, Acting Provost-Marshal of the Eighth Army Corps, Middle Department. NEUBRIX was then taken before Gen. SCHENCK, who detained him for examination, but there being no charges preferred, ordered his release. While NEWBRIX was confined in the Baltimore jail, a person named BLANDY made his acquaintance, and after impressing him with the idea that he was unjustly detained, and working upon his feelings by various means, offered to effect his release for five hundred pounds sterling. NEWBRIX consented to the terms, and shortly after obtained his liberty, not, of course, through the intercession of BLANDY, but in pursuance of the order issued by Gen. SCHENK. CONSTABLE, at the time of NEWBRIX's imprisonment, took possession of the $8,000, which sum he held when the agreement was made between the latter and BLANDY. Upon the day of his release, the victim proceeded to CONSTABLE's office, where he met BLANDY, who told him that he had been to more trouble and expense than he anticipated, and should require from him an additional sum of money sufficient to make the total amount of $3,000. CONSTABLE also informed NEWBRIX that he expected that amount to be paid, and joined with BLANDY in his attempts at swindling. They finally succeeded in obtaining the $3,000, after which CONSTABLE escorted NEWBRIX to the Philadelphia depot, placed him on board the cars, and strictly enjoined him never to make his reappearance in Baltimore.

The matter having become known to Gen. DRAPER, he dispatched Deputy Provost-Marshal SAMUEL J. GLASSEY to Baltimore to investigate the circumstances. After remaining in Baltimore one day and having satisfied himself of the truth of the statements, Mr. GLASSEY proceeded to Washington and made the facts known to Secretary of War, STANTON, who immediately ordered the arrest of CONSTABLE and his transmittal to that city. CONSTABLE is now in custody at Washington, awaiting his examination. His accomplice, BLANDY, has not yet been discovered, but officers are on his track and will doubtless succeed in bringing him to justice.

THE HOMICIDE OF THOMAS BYRNES.

Trial of Dennis P. Sullivan for Murder.

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER.

Before Justice W. H. LEONARD.

The trial of DENNIS P. SULLIVAN for the murder of THOMAS BYRNES, late Superintendent of Lands and Places, commenced in this Court before Judge LEONARD on Monday. It will be recollected that the homicide of Mr. BYRNES occurred in Greenwich-street, between Liberty and Cedar streets, early on the morning of the 29th of November last, a few days before the Charter election. The prisoner, it appears, was engaged in posting handbills for the opposition candidate to the Democracy, and, as is alleged, was attacked by BYRNES and his party, who attempted to interfere with his work. An altercation ensued, during which SULLIVAN discharged a pistol, the ball taking effect in the abdomen of BYRNES, who died from the wound at 5 P. M. the same day. The homicide gave rise to a good deal of excitement among the politicians of the First Ward at the time, and had an important bearing on the Aldermanic canvass then pending. The present trial seems to be attended with equal feeling, and the Court-room was crowded with First Ward politicians, and friends of the deceased and of the prisoner.

The prosecution is conducted by A. OAKEY HALL, Esq., the District-Attorney, aided by his First Assistant, Mr. S. V. GARVIN. The prisoner has an able array of counsel, in the persons of Ex-Recorder SMITH, Ex-Assistant District-Attorney SEDGWICK, and CHARLES S. SPENCER, Esq.

Two hours and a half were occupied in impannelling a jury, the principal obstacle being found in the "conscientious scruples" which jurors avowed that they entertained against finding a verdict of guilty where the punishment was death. Several peremptory challenges were made in behalf of the defence, and two or three for the prosecution, but they finally succeeded in getting a very intelligent jury, composed of the following-named gentlemen:

Henry V. Parsall,	Seth H. Grant,
Chas. S. Holder,	Wm. W. Hurd,
Hans J. Hansen,	Orrin S. Titus,
John Surin,	David Griffiths,
Leopold Friend,	Geo. B. Overheiser,
Ward McLean,	Jesse J. Davis.

Mr. GARVIN opened the case to the jury in behalf of the People, in a brief statement of the circumstances attending the homicide, and proceeded to call the following witnesses:

Geo. Brundidge sworn—Resided on night of homicide at No. 124 Liberty-street, fronting on Greenwich-street; my attention was first attracted by loud talking outside; heard some say, "If I was a white man, I would not work for a nigger;" a man replied, "I am no nigger—I am as good a Democrat as you are;" I raised the window, and saw from twelve to fifteen persons on the sidewalk in Greenwich-street; I heard some one say, "Look out, he has got a pistol;" another person said, "Yes, he has showed it once before to-night;" some one replied, "Yes, I have got a pistol, and if I am compelled to use it, I shall use it; I am not afraid of any one man in the First Ward, but if a whole crowd attack me, I shall defend myself;" some of the party then rushed at him, and said they would "shove the pistol ——;" they shoved him up against a wagon, and then I saw a flash of a pistol and heard the report; the crowd then ran, some one way and some another; some one said, "Officer, I am in your charge;" nothing further was said or done; I didn't know any of the parties; my window is twelve or fourteen feet above the sidewalk; think I saw two policemen while they were talking before the shot; didn't hear any policeman say anything; the talk was among those who appeared to belong to the crowd; the whole transaction occupied from three to five minutes; should think it was between 1 and 2 o'clock; I did not leave my room.

Cross-examined—The man who, I suppose, fired the pistol, got away from the crowd by himself; he went up Greenwich-street; the crowd then rushed upon him; didn't see anybody knocked down.

Re-direct—I could not see any faces plain enough to recognise them; the milk wagon, against which the man was shoved, was nearly opposite my window, a little down the street.

Dr. John P. Kennedy sworn—Saw Thomas Byrnes after he was shot at the City Hospital; he came there about two o'clock on the morning of the 29th of November; I attended him until he died, which was at five o'clock P. M. of the same day; the cause of his death was a gunshot wound; he was injured from the outset that he could not live; I told him between three and four o'clock in the afternoon that if he had any will to make he had better attend to it; a Coroner was called and took his ante-mortem statement.

Cross-examined—The bullet entered 2¾ inches below the umbilicus, a little to the right, and passed directly through, in a downward, oblique direction, and lodged in the sacrum; we had a consultation about the position of the body when the wound was received; the result of the consultation was not definite; we came to the conclusion that Mr. Byrnes must have been leaning forward at the time, or else that the person discharging the pistol must have fired it from an elevated position; the wound could not have been inflicted by a person standing in front of the deceased, and on a level with him.

John Moore sworn—Was with Mr. Byrnes on the night of the homicide; Mr. Byrnes, Mr. Stripp and myself were walking up Greenwich-street, and when near Liberty-street, we heard a party on the opposite side; Mr. Byrnes pulled out his watch and remarked that it was rather too late to go up to the Third Ward; I said we had better go home; Mr. Stripp passed over to see who the party were; we heard some one say he would bet $20; I recognised the prisoner, as I came up, with his hands in his pockets; Byrnes did not say anything; the prisoner said, "Here comes Byrnes, he will hold the money;" Byrnes said to the prisoner, "What have you got that thing in your hands for;" prisoner seemed to be angry, and Byrnes said, "Give him in charge of an officer;" two officers came up and told the crowd to disperse;" Byrnes said, "I give this man in your charge; the officers moved toward the prisoner, when the party that was with him gathered around the officers; one of them said the prisoner had no pistol; the prisoner replied and said he had a pistol; one of the officers then took hold of him, and Byrnes, who previously had him by the coat, let go of him; at this time, just as the policeman took hold of him, the pistol went off; Byrnes put his hand on his bowels and wheeled around; Byrnes was standing up at the time, three or four feet from the prisoner; the affair occurred opposite a jeweler's shop, about the middle of the sidewalk; the places were nearly all closed in that neighborhood; after the shot Byrnes walked down toward the Station-house; there were from seven to nine persons in the prisoner's crowd; did not see anything in the prisoner's hand until after the shot was fired; I then saw a pistol in his hand; I was standing alongside of Byrnes when he was shot.

Cross-examined—Have lived in New-York 16 years; reside at No. 22 Trinity-place; had known Mr. Byrnes eight or nine years; we were walking at the time up Greenwich-street, between Cedar and Liberty streets; Stripp had not been across the street more than a minute before Byrnes and I followed him; don't recollect anything that occurred after we crossed the street besides what I have stated on my direct examination; don't know who it was that offered to bet $20; when the policemen came up Byrnes insisted upon the prisoner being arrested; the name of the policeman who took hold of the prisoner is Hoffner; don't recollect anything that either Byrnes or the prisoner said while Byrnes had hold of him; there might have been something said that I did not hear; I tried to get the pistol away from the prisoner, and pulled him down upon his knees; I had drank several times that night; had been in four or five places; can't say exactly how many; we were electioneering that night; think some of the party treated in every place we went into; I did not drink at all the places; can't name the places in which I did not drink; didn't have any difficulty with any one else that night that I recollect.

Re-direct—Byrnes lived at No. 3 Morris-street; we were going up to the Third Ward when we heard the crowd; we had been to a meeting at the Cooper Institute that night; I have been a Custom-house boatman for five or seven years.

At the close of the examination of this witness the Court adjourned to 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

SECOND DAY.

As on the first day of the trial the Court-room was crowded with spectators, among whom were many of the political friends of the late Mr. BYRNES. His son-in-law, Mr. FOX, present Alderman of the First Ward, has occupied a seat by the District-Attorney since the commencement of the trial. The prisoner is apparently about 26 years of age, and has by no means a vicious, but rather a pleasant and benevolent expression of countenance.

Matthew Stripp, sworn—Knew the deceased Mr. Byrnes; was with him on the night of the homicide; first met him that night in Broadway coming down with the procession from the Cooper Institute; went with him to Greenwich-street; it was about one or two o'clock A. M. that we met the crowd to which the prisoner belonged; we were going down Greenwich-street toward home, and when between Cedar and Liberty streets, on the west side, we observed the prisoner's party; they were making a noise and had music; Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Moore were with me; we had been in No. 108 Cedar-street; left there about one and a half o'clock; when we heard the noise I crossed over, and the first man I met was the prisoner, who had a ladder on his shoulder; he was ahead of the crowd on the sidewalk, about the middle of the block; I believe there were eight or nine persons with him; I knew none of them except the prisoner; I said, "I suppose you are putting up bills;" some of the party said, "Yes;" I asked what bills they were and some said they were for Smith, "Our next Alderman;" some one then took me one side, and at this time Moore and Byrnes came up, and I heard some one say he had a pistol; another person said he had no pistol; then I heard the prisoner say he had a pistol; at that time I heard Byrnes say he would give him in charge of an officer; think two officers had hold of him when this remark was made; I then walked a little one side, and saw the two officers, Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Moore, talking together; then I kind o' looked around and saw the flash of a pistol; I then went toward Byrnes and he told me he was shot, and asked me to get him a carriage; I went and got a carriage and took it to the Station-house, where I found Byrnes sitting on the stoop; I was five or six feet from the others when I saw the flash of the pistol; think the officers took hold of the prisoner before he fired; I took Mr. Byrnes to the Hospital in the carriage with two officers and Mr. Moore; did not see any blows struck either by the deceased or the prisoner; did not see any pistol.

Cross-examined by Mr. Sedgwick—Was born in the First Ward, and have lived there all my life; I don't write or read; never was arrested to my knowledge; never was in the station-house under arrest; yes I was once on election day; I crossed the street a little way from the corner of Cedar-street; think it was five or ten minutes after I crossed before Mr. Byrnes and Moore came up; don't know whether I or the prisoner first offered to bet $20 on the election; Mr. Byrnes and Moore came up while I and the prisoner were talking about the bet; can't recollect anything else that was said before Byrnes came up; didn't hear anything said about a "nigger" or an "Abolitionist," or about Smith having "niggers to work for him;" didn't hear any angry remark made; no one put his hands on the prisoner before Byrnes came up; can't tell how it was after Byrnes came up before the pistol was fired; it might have been twenty minutes more or less; did not see any one have hold of the prisoner before the officers took hold of him. (Mr. Sedgwick here read the deposition of the witness, taken before the Coroner, in which he said that Byrnes had hold of the prisoner at the time he was shot.) I didn't strike any one that evening; didn't see any blows struck by any one; when the pistol was fired Moore rushed toward the prisoner and pulled him down on his knees; Byrnes, Moore and I had been together from about half past ten o'clock that night; we were electioneering; we went into several friends of ours and had some drinks; we may have been in seven or eight places, among them Mr. Fox's, No. 30 Broadway; Micky Dunphy's, Mr. Fitzgerald's, in Morris-street; Mr. Cherry's, in Greenwich-street; Burke's, in Greenwich-street, and No. 108 Cedar-street; I only drank brandy and beer.

Dr. Thomas Robinson, sworn—I assisted in making a post-mortem examination of deceased; Mr. Byrnes died about five o'clock P. M., of the 29th of November; I took his ante-mortem statement in writing; the prisoner was present; after it was taken it was read over to Mr. Byrnes by myself; he died in about half an hour after he made the statement.

Cross-examined—The statement was made in presence of myself, the jury and the prisoner; he was very feeble; it was with great effort that he got through with each sentence; from the post-mortem examination, my opinion, as well as that of other physicians, was that he was in a stooping position when the shot was fired; Mr. Byrnes made one observation that is not in the written statement.

Charles Mills, sworn—Am a First Ward policeman; my attention was first attracted on the night in question by hearing Officer Hoffner's voice, saying "move along;" I was standing in the Station-house at the time; I went down to Greenwich-street, and saw the crowd on the east side of the street; I went up to them, as they were moving toward Liberty-street; when I first got to them I recognized Sullivan and Byrnes, who were the only persons that I knew; just before I got to the crowd, I heard some one say, "he has got a revolver," or "You have got a revolver," the prisoner said, "yes, I have got one and will use it if necessary;" should think there were about a dozen in the crowd; Byrnes and Sullivan stood face

TRACEY, Secretary of the Society, addressed the audience, and took occasion to censure the Methodist denomination for its backwardness in not contributing to a larger extent than it has done hitherto in aid of the funds of the Society—the amount of last year's "material aid" from that sect being only $51.

Rev. Dr. TYNG followed Mr. TRACEY, and presented in a most striking manner the claims of our naval seamen to the gratitude of all Christian philanthropists.

Rev. Dr. HODGE, Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, and Rev. Mr. HEDSTROM, (Pastor of the Seamen's Bethel Church,) followed in short but earnest addresses, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. NEWMAN, and the meeting adjourned, several of the auditors having subscribed money in aid of the proposed object.

This meeting is the first of a series that will be held in order to furnish for our sailors, especially those of the navy, such a home as they will need after having braved for years the perils of the sea.

Naval Affairs.

ANOTHER IRON-CLAD BOUND SOUTH.

The iron-clad Sangamon, which our Washington correspondent mentioned as being ordered South in 96 hours, has been completed. She was put formally in commission at Chester, Penn., on Monday, her ship's company having been all on board. She left yesterday for Port Royal, via Fortress Monroe. Her crew, consisting of 19 seamen, 10 ordinary seamen, 18 landsmen, 2 boys, 3 first-class firemen and 7 coal-heavers, making a total of 69, were taken from the Navy-yard to Chester in a tugboat. Capt. GUSSY, the commander of the Sangamon, the Commandant at the Navy-yard, and several other naval officers, were on board the tug. On reaching Chester the iron-clad moved out into the stream and anchored. Capt. GUSSY then took charge of the Monitor, and, after the men had been called together, addressed them in a brief and patriotic speech. The whalers in front of the yard where the iron-clad was built were crowded with citizens of Chester, who were anxious to see the Sangamon leave for her destination.

MAILS FOR THE MEDITERRANEAN.

The regular navy store-ship Release, with mails for the Mediterranean squadron, will be forwarded on Friday, from Boston, in this vessel, which is the regular store-ship of the fleet. Letters, small parcels and packages for officers and men attached to the squadron sent post-free to the care of the commandant of the Charlestown Navy-yard will be dispatched gratis. The West India ships which can be reached at present in the Mediterranean are the sailing corvettes Constellation and St. Louis. It would not be safe at present to mail communications for the Chippewa, Vanderbilt or Tuscarora, which were some time since located in the Straits.

THE CALIFORNIA BATTERY TO BE ALTERED.

The California iron-clad battery Comanche is to be altered, in obedience to instructions just received from the Navy Department. She is to be made much stronger in the hull, and to have some important improvements effected in her designs. These alterations, the details of which it is deemed best not to publish, will necessarily delay the completion of the vessel. She is now on the stocks at Secor Iron Works, Jersey City, and has been put up thus far in the very best manner. Mr. BIRKBECK, who is superintending the construction of all iron-clads in progress in Jersey City, is endeavoring to make the construction of this vessel—the first ever built here in portable sections—a sample of American mechanism that cannot be surpassed. The Tecumseh and two other iron-clads are building at the Works. The latter will soon be ready for launching.

The Ike Cook Libel Suit Against the Tribune.

UNITED STATES DEPUTY MARSHAL PEALE IN SEARCH OF MR. GREELEY.

Mr. ISAAC COOK, of Chicago, Ill., has commenced a suit in the United States Court against The Tribune Association to answer for an alleged libel against him. The capias laying the damages at $50,000 was issued on Monday, and was placed in the hands of U. S. Deputy Marshal PEALS, who went to the Tribune office in search of Mr. GREELEY soon afterward to serve it. He did not find him there, and at a later hour he went over again, but Mr. GREELEY had not then arrived.

The article which Mr. COOK considered libelous, and for the publication of which he has brought the suit for damages, appeared on the editorial page of the Tribune of Monday, Jan. 5. The article, founded on a telegram, speaks of Mr. ISAAC COOK as "that this notorious character has defaulted as Army Paymaster to the tune of half a million dollars, which he has lost in gambling;" that "the Chicago Post-office became a den of thieves under his rule," and makes a number of other assertions which Mr. COOK considers injurious to his character and standing in society, and libelous. In the Tribune of Jan. 7, a letter from a correspondent appeared, complaining that the Tribune had done Mr. ISAAC COOK an injustice: and calling attention to the telegram as having related to a Mr. ISAAC N. COOK, another man entirely. On the editorial page, the same day, there appeared a paragraph, stating "that the defaulting army Paymaster COOK is not the Ex-Postmaster of Chicago, as we were informed, but a totally different person—ISAAC N. COOK, of Ohio. Of course we retract all that we said on Monday of the Chicago COOK, regretting that we have used his name in connection with this flagrant public robbery," &c.

Soon after the publication of the alleged libel, the TIMES stated the fact that Mr. COOK had commenced proceedings against Mr. GREELEY, and the Tribune denied it. The developments would seem to indicate that the TIMES was right and the Tribune wrong.

The Government Storage Case.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The article in your Friday's paper in relation to our bills for storage, of nine cargoes resin, prize property, has greatly surprised us, being so different from the facts, and we must ask the privilege to say, that our bills for storage of the resin were for prices fixed and agreed to by the Marshal himself, and allowed by him in other cases; that the cargoes were in exceedingly bad order, the greater part being in bulk, the balance in a badly damaged state, all needing much extra labor and repairs, and being kept on storage several months.

The allegation in relation to the bill of cooperage which you specify, is incorrect.

All we have done is to apply to have our bills investigated, and proved before the Court in the usual manner, without any wish to recover any more than we should be entitled to. This, to our astonishment, was opposed by the Marshal, and the Court refused our request, on the ground that, unless the Marshal would consent to the course we proposed, we must resort to the formality of a suit by monition, which we shall do without delay, when we shall endeavor not only to maintain our character, but to exhibit the true cause of the attacks upon us which have appeared in some of the papers, and show how easily we might have had our bills allowed by pursuing a different course. Yours respectfully,

WARD & GOVE.

Thrice Tried—A Peculiar Question of Damage.

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM.

Before Justice Monell.

Garret S. Mott vs. The Hudson River Railroad Company.—The plaintiff is a lumber merchant, at Mott's Point, and brought his action against the defendants to recover damages for the destruction of a house belonging to him, by fire, under the following circumstances: On the 15th July, 1857, the plaintiff's house took fire about 12½ o'clock, and while Engine No. 32 was playing upon the fire a train of defendants' cars came along, cutting off the hose, by reason of which, it was claimed the property was destroyed. A number of firemen testified that efforts were made to stop the train by signals, but without effect, and it was claimed that the engineer was negligent. The defence was that the Company had a right of way by the premises, (in the neighborhood of Fifty-fifth street,) and that the damage done was too remote to sustain the action; also that they were not negligent. The case was reported in the TIMES on 22d of May, 1860, having been before twice tried—the jury in the first instance giving the plaintiff $6,000, in the second, finding a verdict for the defendant. A third trial was now had, and the case did not go to the jury, the plaintiff being non-suited.

TUESDAY, Feb. 10—P. M.

The price of Gold is again lower to-day, and sales were made as low as 152½ ℔ cent., against yesterday's sales at 156½ down to 155½ ℔ cent. A subsequent reaction took place at the breaking up of the Second regular Board to 153½ ℔ cent., making the whole decline about 3½ ℔ cent. from the business of Saturday last. The speculation was weak yesterday on the Army and Navy news from Vicksburgh and Charleston, and was made weaker to-day by the more general impression that important events are pending on the Southern coast, and the news from France that a Conference between the North and South has been suggested by the Emperor NAPOLEON through his Ambassador at Washington. To these inferences is added the prospect that the General Banking Scheme of Secretary CHASE will be accepted by Congress as a substitute for the further increase of United States Notes of Circulation, under the authority of the new Loan and Treasury bill. The price for Bills on London fell off to 169 ℔ cent., and under the present feeling in Gold, remitters are not disposed to purchase beyond their very immediate wants. The rate for Money continues at 7 ℔ cent. as the rule of the Banks and on the Street to the Stock Brokers. The exceptions are on Government Securities at 6 ℔ cent., and the same on choice Merchant paper of short date.

Early in the day, the Share list at the Stock Exchange sympathized quite decidedly with the decline in Gold and Exchange; but not so the Government Stocks and Treasury paper, which were again on the advance, and in good request. Heavy sales of Erie Common Shares were made at 72½ ℔ cent. at the First Board, and of Cleveland and Pittsburgh and Michigan Southern at a decline of 1@1½ ℔ cent. from the quotations of Monday night. But at the 1 o'clock Public Board the demand for nearly all the Railways improved, and in the afternoon, at the Second regular Board, prices were firm, and tending upward for the Eries and some other descriptions, under a continued and weak Market for Gold.

At the 4 o'clock Public Board, the following prices were made as compared with Monday night. At 153½ ℔ cent. there was a good demand for Gold, which was freely met, and the price subsequently fell to 153½ ℔ cent. Among the Railways, Erie was in strong demand, and recovered 2 ℔ cent. from the lowest sales of the morning, and Toledo ¼ ℔ cent. In other descriptions, the demand was not so animated. The general Market left off steady.

FRUIT—Were in less request, including Layer Raisins, at $4 25, and Bunch do. at $3 95@$4, ℔ whole box.

GUNNY BAGS AND BAGGING—Were lightly dealt in at unchanged prices.

GRAIN—Wheat has been quite sparingly sought after, and has again declined 2c.@3c. ℔ bushel, in view of the heavy fall in gold. Sales, since our last, 54,000 bushels, including White Western, at $1 81@$1 85; Amber Western, at $1 67@$1 70; Red Western, (Winter,) at $1 61@$1 66; Amber Iowa and Wisconsin, at $1 60@$1 65; Milwaukee Club, at $1 50@$1 60; Chicago Spring at $1 38@$1 50 ℔ bushel. Corn has been in less demand, at materially reduced rates. Sales, since our last, 83,000 bushels, at 90c.@92c., chiefly at 90c.@91c. for shipping Mixed Western; 88c.@90c. for Eastern do.; 78c.@88c. for Unsound, and 95c.@96c. for White and Yellow Western, ℔ bushel. Rye continues inactive, at $1 03@$1 12, according to quality, ℔ bushel. Oats are in less request, including Canada, at 72c.@75c.; Western, at 72c.@75c.; State, at 74c.@76c., ℔ bushel. Barley is in moderete demand, at $1 45@$1 60 ℔ bushel. Sales, 2,000 bushels.

The business in Breadstuffs during the past fortnight, Mr. EDWARD BILL reviews thus: "In the early part of the fortnight there was an increased inquiry for Flour, and the lower grades were advanced 25c.@50c. ℔ barrel, but for the week past, with more liberal arrivals and a decrease of the foreign demand, together with material fluctuations and a decline in Gold and Sterling Exchange, the advance formerly obtained has been lost. There is less want of the article for investment, and more desire on the part of speculators to realize. At the close of business yesterday, there was but little doing, the market closing heavily. A fair business has been done in Wheat, but the late foreign advices have disappointed shippers, and the orders are at low limits. The purchases on Western account have ceased, still holders do not press sales, having confidence in the future for prime qualities, the stock of which is not large; the market closes tamely but firmly. Rye of good quality is scarce and wanted. For Corn there is some speculative demand and prices fluctuate. The stock of that in prime shipping condition is light and holders are firm. The Export Clearances from this port for the fortnight foot up to Great Britain and Ireland, 65,406 bbls. Flour, 859,966 bushels Wheat, and 189,127 bushels Corn. To France (Marseilles) 18,594 bushels Wheat. To Portugal 6,297 bbls. Flour, 28,208 bushels Wheat. To Madeira, 748 bbls. Flour. To Gibraltar, 3,994 bbls. Flour. To Continental Ports, 636 bbls. Flour, 11,532 bushels Wheat, and 8,528 bushels Rye. To Brazil, 4,465 bbls. Flour. To Mexico, 3,013 bbls. Flour, 36,206 bushels Corn, 14,784 bushels Barley, and 32,855 bushels Oats."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The steamship North Star arrived at this port yesterday from New-Orleans via Key West. Her advices are not so late as those by the Marion, but are interesting. She brings as passenger Col. HENRY C. DEMING, late Acting Mayor of New-Orleans, and Commander of the Twelfth Connecticut Volunteers, who has resigned both positions. A steamer rigged as a bark, supposed to be the pirate Alabama, made her appearance off Southwest Pass on the 23d ult. She was apparently watching for signals. A number of the Pass pilots have been placed under arrest for communicating with her. The rebels at Sabine Pass destroyed the ship Morning Light, a short time after capturing her, on the approach of some of our gunboats from Galveston. The schooner captured by them was the transport Velocity.

Our Key West advices by the North Star are to the 4th inst., inclusive. The most noticeable news is the announcement of the return to the station of the Nineteith New-York Regiment, commanded by Col. MORGAN, which, it will be recollected, was transferred to Port Royal by order of Gen. BRANNAN, on representations made by some of the residents of Key West, aided by statements in the correspondence of a New-York paper. These representations having been proved to be incorrect, Gen. HUNTER, as Commander of the Department, has ordered the return of the regiment, which was received with acclamation on landing. The Forty-seventh Pennsylvania, which temporarily occupied the place of Col. MORGAN'S regiment, was to return to Port Royal. There is very little other news.

A Nashville dispatch informs us that our forces entered Lebanon, Tenn., on the 8th inst., and captured some 600 persons, principally belonging to the guerrilla MORGAN'S command. A number of field officers are said to have been taken. The first railroad train for Murfreesboro since the battle of Stones River is to leave Nashville to-day.

The temporary interruption of telegraphic communication with Nashville started wild rumors in Louisville on Friday regarding renewed rebel raids upon the railroad. It was reported that a company of the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers had been captured in the vicinity of Mitchellsville by a body of rebel cavalry, but the story was not confirmed at last accounts. Some rebel sympathizers in the vicinity of Mitchellsville were suspected of having removed a few rails to hinder the passage of trains. Nothing further has been heard of JOHN MORGAN, who was said to be advancing upon Lexington. A reconnoissance sent from Danville to Crab Orchard had failed to find any trace of him.

The repulse of the rebels at Fort Donelson, on the Cumberland, was most signal, as Gen. ROSECRANS' official dispatch has stated. The Louisville Journal learns from Nashville that, in all probability the notorious Col. FRANK MCNAIRY, of blood-hound infamy, was killed in the engagement. The Union troops occupying the forts in the vicinity of Donelson are the Thirteenth Wisconsin, FLOOD'S battery, and the Fifth Iowa cavalry. The Eighty-third Illinois is quartered in Fort Donelson, and Col. HARDING commands. Col. LOWE, of the Fifth Iowa cavalry, has general charge of Forts Donelson, Henry and Heiman.

A reconnoitering party which recently went out from Yorktown, on representations made by rebel deserters, fell into an ambuscade, and the commanding officer, Capt. FAITH, was seriously wounded. He pressed his reconnoissance further than his instructions warranted. Our total loss was about thirty men.

We learn from Washington that a party of a hundred loyal Kansas Indians has penetrated Texas, and captured the rebel Wachita Agency, with one hundred disloyal Indians and a large number of horses, papers and Confederate bonds. Among the papers were treaties made with the rebel Government, and signed by ALBERT PIKE.

It is reported that the pirate Alabama arrived at Kingston, Jamaica, on the 20th of January, and landed the crew of the United States steamer Hatteras; and she was so badly damaged by the shot of the Hatteras that immediate repairs were required at Kingston. This is in accordance with advices before published by us.

The St. Louis Democrat states that Gen. POPE is expected in that city the present week. It gives currency to a rumor that he has gone West to take command of the expedition against Vicksburgh.

The Starkville (Miss.) Banner, of January 17, says it has learned from a reliable and authentic source, and accords full credence to the report, that Senator BRIGHT'S wife, of Indiana, crossed Gen. BRAGG'S lines, in possession of sealed dispatches for JEFF. DAVIS, the contents of which, as announced, solicit the Confederate Government to receive into its Confederation the States of Illinois and Indiana, and in fact all the States west of the Mississippi.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the bill to reorganize the Post-office Department was passed. A bill to authorize an increase of Major and Brigadier Generals was reported from the Military Committee. The President was called upon for any correspondence with the French Government on the subject of mediation, arbitration, or other means looking to a termination of the war. The National Currency bill was then taken up, and Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, proceeded to explain its provisions. Various amendments were proposed and rejected, and the Senate adjourned without coming to any conclusion on the bill.

In the house, after some unimportant business, the consideration of the cases of Messrs. FLANDERS and HAHN, elected from New-Orleans, was resumed, and continued until the adjournment. No question was taken.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill for the establishment of a new Quarantine at the port of New-York was introduced. It provides for building an island on Oak Orchard Shoals, and erecting suitable buildings thereon—the present Board of Commissioners to be continued three years. A resolution to adjourn over from the 19th to the 25th inst., was adopted. The general bill legalizing the State bounties to volunteers was made the special order for Thursday, at noon. The Committee on Banks made an unfavorable report on the proposition of the Commissioners of the Canal Fund, that the principal and interest of the State debt should be paid in coin.

In the Assembly, among the bills reported favorably was the one to punish frauds upon laborers and others seeking employment, and the one to provide for the continuance of aid to the families of volunteers. A bill was introduced to give the police justices of Brooklyn power to cause police officers to bring before them at any time prisoners not confined by order of any Court. Mr. DEAN introduced a bill to amend the Metropolitan Police Law. It provides for the appointment of a new Commissioner by the Governor and Senate, two of each political party, and alters the details of the present system. It was referred to the Committee on Cities. A bill was introduced authorizing the New-York Volunteers to vote by proxy. The bill to incorporate the Spring-street Railroad already noticed, was introduced and referred to the Committee on Railroads. An effort to have it sent to the Committee on Cities failed. A petition to restore Slavery in the State was presented. The Assembly held an evening session.

GENERAL NEWS.

The last week's exports from the port of New-York of domestic produce and miscellaneous goods, (exclusive of specie,) reached the extraordinary amount of $5,154,962, of which to the single port of Liverpool there were exported $1,893,135; and to London, $633,962. Included in the exports to Liverpool were nearly 23,000 barrels of Flour, 406,000 bushels Wheat, 126,000 bushels Corn, and a very large quantity of Provisions; to London, 22,000 barrels Flour, 150,000 bushels Wheat, and Provisions to the value of nearly $146,000.

A sad disaster occurred within a few miles of the light-ship, off Sandy Hook, on Monday night last—the steamer Ella Warley, outward bound, having collided with the steamer North Star, from Key West and New Orleans. Six of the Ella Warley's crew were lost, as was the steamer and cargo. The North Star sustained considerable damage, but will be repaired in a few weeks.

The screw-steamship City of Washington, Capt. HALCROW, which left Liverpool at noon on the 21st and Queenstown on the evening of the 22d of January, arrived here last night. Her advices are no later than those of the Hansa, and not so late as those of the Europa, already published.

The Board of Supervisors met at 3 o'clock, yesterday. Three vetoes by the Mayor were taken up and overruled. They were upon resolutions to increase the salary of the District Attorney to $7,000, that of his two associates to $3,500, and to give him an additional Clerk at a salary of $1,200; to pay a batch of Harlem bridge bills; and to appropriate $3,000 for the correction of the militia rolls filed with the County Clerk, "by striking therefrom the names of all persons who filed their exemption or who attended the annual parade as required by law." The Board adjourned till 3 P. M. on next Tuesday,

The former engineers of the Princess Royal, Messrs. HUNTLEY & THOMPSON, did all in their power during the recent attack upon our fleet off Charleston to prevent the recapture of their vessel by the rebels, and the escape of the vessel was greatly due to their exertions.

Commander PARKER, United States steamer Cambridge, reports, Jan. 23, that he captured the schooner Time, from Nassau, laden with salt, ten miles from Fort Fisher. Her manifest showed a cargo of soda, watches and shoes; but her real cargo was salt. Commander PARKER placed a prize crew on board and sent her to Beaufort with her papers. Her Captain he detained on the Cambridge.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday, before Recorder HOFFMAN, AUSTIN HENRY, alias Heeny, alias Heenan, indicted for the murder of his sister, MARGARET MCLAUGHLIN, by beating and throwing her down stairs, pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the second degree, and was remanded for sentence on Saturday next.

In the Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judge LEONARD, the trial of DENNIS P. SULLIVAN for the murder of THOMAS BYRNES, was continued yesterday. The evidence for the people was concluded, and after examining two or three witnesses for the defence, the Court adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning.

The price of Gold Coin fell 2 ₩ cent. yesterday, and closed 153¼ ₩ cent. Exchange, 169@ 169½ ₩ cent. The Government securities were firm and in demand. The Railways sympathized with the decline in Gold early in the day, but subsequently recovered and closed steady.

Breadstuffs were quite dull yesterday. Flour declined 15c.@25c. ₩ bbl.; Wheat and Corn, 2c.@3c. ₩ bushel. Cotton was in lively request at a further rise of 1c. ₩ lb. Provisions were quiet; Hog products were drooping. Sugars and Molasses were in fair demand, as were also Hay, Hops, Oils, Skins, Spices, Tobacco and Foreign Liquors. Teas, Tallow, Whisky and Wool were actively sought after. The Freight market was inactive.

The live stock markets have been abundantly supplied with cattle this week, with a deficiency of sheep and hogs. The weather has been warm and unfavorable, but meats have been in fair request, and butchers were in want of about their usual number of animals at the regular opening of the market. A few of the wholesalers had supplied themselves at Albany, or purchased stock that came in late last week, and were not as needy yesterday. Beeves number 5,986 received since last report. This is the largest weekly supply since December, and more than were actually needed. All were eventually sold, but at a decline of ¼c. ₩ lb. on the average, and ½c. or more at the close of the market. A few extra fat cattle were early sold at 11c.@11½c. ₩ lb., dressed weight, and quite a number at 10½c. The good cattle were not plenty and were in good request; but there was a surplus of poor stock which sold slowly. The market closed heavily.... Sheep are still very high and far from plenty, though rather easier than last week. They are worth 7¼c.@7¾c. ₩ lb., live weight. A few have brought 8c., and all have been sold without satisfying the wants of butchers.... Live hogs are not coming forward very freely. Receipts 21,271 for the week. They have all been sold at a little advance. Present prices, 5½c.@5¾c. for common, and 4¾c.@5½c. for still-fed hogs.

TROUBLES IN GEORGIA.—We have news, this morning, of a brisk skirmish in Upper Georgia, between a body of citizens of the State and the rebel troops sent to put down the disaffection in that region. It is likely enough to be true. There were several such skirmishes in East Tennessee a year ago. But they were all suppressed, and the men engaged in them have nearly all been drafted into the rebel army. We presume these outbreaks in Georgia will have the same result. There are strong elements of disaffection, rebellion and revolution against the Confederacy all over the South among the poor whites, but they cannot be availed of as Union elements until the rebel Government is overthrown.

The Tribune and the War—The Future of the Country.

From the Tribune, Feb. 10.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is very gravely mistaken in saying that we ever proposed to make peace in case the rebellion is not subdued in three months. What we did propose was a very different sort of warfare from any we have yet had, with a vast augmentation of our forces by closing West Point, stopping the Coast Survey, and calling out the militia, so as to test the strength of the nation as compared with that of the rebels. We believe the back of the rebellion might thus be broken within three months; but, as the war is now carried on, it may run three years for aught we know, yet prove nothing as to the main point. That the Richmond Dispatch should pervert what we said, gives the TIMES no warrant for doing likewise. Nor has has the TIMES any right to say that we have made personal efforts with M. Mercier or any one else in favor of mediation. The TIMES is already aware of this.

We owe the Tribune an apology; we have evidently misunderstood its language. While we have no disposition to make any special issue on the point, the Tribune must excuse us for saying that its language was calculated to mislead us. On the 27th December, in publishing a letter of JEWETT, advocating intervention, the Tribune made the following editorial comments:

From the Tribune, Dec. 27.

If a Government notoriously free from partiality or from sinister impulses—that of Switzerland for example—were to tender to ours its good offices to bring about a reconciliation between us and the Rebels, we should urge that the proposition be met frankly and cordially. * * Give us an intelligent, capable and upright tribunal, and we would urge that our Government should accept it and appear before it. * * Only secure a capable and candid tribunal, and we should be willing to submit without fear to its ARBITRATION.

We confess that we did regard this as an indication that the Tribune was in favor of Foreign Mediation, and was ready even to submit the controversy between us and the rebels to the arbitration of some foreign Power. On the 30th of January, Mr. GREELEY acknowledged that he had been in communication, both verbal and written, with M. MERCIER, the French Minister, and with VALLANDIGHAM, of Ohio, on the subject of mediation. We felt justified in drawing the inference that he was in favor of such foreign intervention, inasmuch as the Tribune, on Dec. 27, had declared itself on that side. Mr. GREELEY'S letter to JEWETT, which we published yesterday, confirmed us in that opinion. We are glad to learn from the Tribune of yesterday, that in spite of all these evidences, we "have no right to say that Mr. GREELEY has made personal efforts, with M. MERCIER or anybody else, in favor of mediation."

We plead the same excuse for having misunderstood its sentiments on the subject of closing the war. In the Tribune of Jan. 22, in a careful leading article on the prospects of the war, we found the following:

From the Tribune, Jan. 22.

Call out the uniformed militia for three months, employ them to garrison Washington, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, &c.

"Borrow temporarily, on the best possible terms, three or four hundred millions, to be paid at the rate of five millions per day, with a clear understanding that we are to borrow no more,—THAT THE WAR IS TO BE FINISHED WITH THIS AMOUNT, and that speedily.

If three months more of earnest fighting shall not serve to make a serious impression on the Rebels,—if the end of that term shall find us no further advanced than its beginning—if some malignant fate has decreed that the blood and treasure of the nation shall ever be squandered in fruitless efforts, let us bow to our destiny AND MAKE THE BEST ATTAINABLE PEACE.

In the Tribune of Jan. 30 we found a declaration that "if the rebels should be successful, and we defeated in the general results of the campaign now opening, impartial third parties will say that we ought to consent to peace on the best attainable terms:"—that the Great Powers will mediate against a continuance of the struggle, as "fruitless, wasteful butchery, and urge a settlement in the interests of humanity and commerce;"—and that "the life or death of the country is no longer a question of years, but of months." And in the Tribune of Feb. 7, in Mr. GREELEY'S letter to Senator DOOLITTLE, we found this statement:

"Only let it be generally agreed that we will crush out the rebellion in the impending campaign or FRANKLY GIVE UP THE JOB, and we can have men and money enough."

It was this language that misled us into the belief that the Tribune had "proposed to make peace in case the rebellion is not subdued in three months." We quote it, not to prove that the Tribune is in favor of such a policy, but to excuse ourselves for having thus understood it. We have not the slightest wish to hold any person to an opinion or a policy which he repudiates. On the contrary, we rejoice most heartily to find the Tribune throwing its powerful weight into the scale of steady, vigorous and persistent war, until the rebellion shall be crushed and the Union restored to its old integrity.

We agree most cordially with the Tribune in its demand for vigorous and effective war. We are not in favor of closing West Point nor of stopping the Coast Survey—for we believe both contribute essentially to the efficiency of our operations against the rebels. But we are in favor of "calling out the militia." We would have the Government take prompt and effective measures for putting every able-bodied man in the loyal States in a condition to render prompt service to the country, whenever that service may be required. There ought to be a reserved force of a million men, in process of discipline and instruction, constantly on hand in the Northern States—to be drawn from as occasion might require, either to strengthen our forces against the rebels, or to defend the country against any foreign Power that should attempt interference in our affairs. It is the first and most imperative duty of the Government thus to organize and discipline the entire military force of the nation; and we shall most gladly join the Tribune in pressing this duty home upon the attention of our rulers at Washington.

We agree, too, with the Tribune in thinking that, with vigorous and effective warfare "the back of the rebellion may be broken within three months." But we also want the rebels and the world distinctly to understand that, whether it takes three months or three years, this war must go on until rebellion is quelled, and the authority of the Constitution is restored over every foot of American soil. We cannot live with anything less. We have too much pride, too much ambition, too high and just a sense of the value of our institutions, too grand an estimate of the position of this free Republic among the nations of the earth, ever to consent to its sacrifice so long as we have life or strength to expend in its defence. We know perfectly the obstacles which obstruct our path. We appreciate fully the energy of resistance which the rebels have shown—the sufferings they undergo, the sacrifices they have made, in their contest for independence. We know the strength of party feeling among Northern men—their impatience, the ease with which they are discouraged, and their too great readiness to seek refuge from immediate and impending evils in the make-shifts and compromises of a seductive but deceptive peace. But we also know that deep down in the American heart—far below all these promptings of distrust, these longings to escape from instant and annoying responsibilities, lies the love of that REPUBLICAN NATIONALITY which the Constitution has created, and of which the American Union is the basis and the guarantee. Our faith is in this. The American People will not surrender it. They will fight for it as the French fought for independence when all the nations of Europe were banded against them. There is no extremity of suffering they will not endure—no supreme effort they will not put forth—rather than see this nation perish and all the pride, all the hope, all the high ambition, all the noble and exalting aspirations they have linked with its future, sink beneath the weltering chaos of the anarchy which must sweep it from the face of the earth.

It is not—let the Tribune rely upon it—it is not in the heart of the American people to let this nation perish. They cannot do it. They must change their natures first. We care not what sweeping gusts of party passion may come over them. We care not what fleeting fears of taxation, what passing dread of fortunes overthrown, what sad shapes of bereavement and desolation, what gloomy forebodings, of vacant firesides and loved voices hushed forever, may visit their anxious and prophetic souls. High above all these in every heart rises the love of that grand and glorious Republic planted by God, hated by tyrants and beloved of free men all over the globe. That love will vindicate itself. It will rescue the nation from the perils that threaten its destruction. It will silence party clamor. It will hush the hoarse cries of faction. And when the supreme moment of danger and of duty shall come,—when there shall seem to be any immediate peril of foreign intervention hostile to our National integrity, or of shameful surrender fatal to our unity and our future glory, that love of country, the spontaneous impulse of every heart, will sweep from its path every passion, every paltry prejudice, every narrow sentiment, every cowardly and disloyal fear, and reinstate the nation in its old integrity and its pristine power.

We understand very well the lavish style in which the war has been carried on, and the small fruits it has thus far yielded. We join the Tribune in demanding reform in these respects. But we have full faith that this reform will come. No nation and no individual ever learns anything from anybody else's experience; but all learn something from their own. If the worst apprehensions of the Tribune should be realized—if this campaign now opening should prove as fruitless as the rest—the People will not despair, but they will reform. We shall then have the war put upon a war footing. We shall have the whole power of the nation armed and arrayed for the conflict. We shall have an end put to plunder, to swindling, to evasions of duty and to sympathy with treason. We shall have our war expenses reduced to four hundred millions a year, and the whole of that sum raised by direct taxation. We shall have an end, for the time, to all minor controversies, to all disputes about Slavery, to all partisan attacks and recriminations, to all personal wranglings, and to all assaults upon the Government which wields the Nation's power, and has the responsibility of defending the Nation's life and honor. And upon this basis we can wage war ten years, if we cannot sooner quell the rebellion which threatens us with destruction. And we can do it without any serious injury to the material resources of the country, or any essential disturbance of its prosperity.

We beg the Tribune to understand and to realize that any peace based on the triumph of the rebellion—any peace which involves Disunion—strikes a death-blow at the very existence of our Republic and renders free Government throughout the world forever impossible. It reduces us to the position of a third or a fifth rate Power. We shall command no more respect, no higher degree of consideration, among the nations of the earth, than Portugal, or Switzerland, or Mexico. Our commerce will become the sport and the prey of every naval Power. Our rights of citizenship will become a scoff, even in Turkey and the barbarous ports of the Celestial Empire. Our freedom will degenerate into lawlessness, or give place to petty despotisms. Slavery will be planted more firmly than ever on every foot of Southern soil. Our history will become a reproach to us. The memories of our ancient glory will sting us like scorpions, and become the brand of our disgrace forever. By the side of such a fate, War, Taxation and Slavery are light and inconsiderable evils, because they are ephemeral in their nature—while for a free nation that perishes from the cowardice and imbecility of its people, there is no hope of resurrection in in all time to come.

The Distress in New-Orleans.

One of our New-Orleans correspondents writes us concerning the terrible condition of the poor in that city. The destruction of its trade and commerce, by the blocking of the Mississippi River, has long kept them out of work; and more than thirty thousand men, women and children, of all nations, (but mostly natives of the British isles,) have, since our occupation of the city, been supported by charity. Thousands of men who had joined the Confederate army left their wives and families behind them to starve; and though "registered enemies" of both sexes have been permitted to go within the rebel lines, very few of the residents have chosen to avail themselves of the opportunity. Gen. BUTLER mitigated the distress by putting the idle men to work on city improvements, at the city's expense; and also by levying contributions on the rich rebels, who were responsible for the unfortunate state of things. Gen. BANKS, by a recent order, announced his purpose to contiuue the policy of levying on property, but he has not yet carried the plan fully into effect, and has thought it prudent to stop entirely the public works. As a consequence, the distress is now nearly as great as ever, and thousands of miserable, helpless and unemployed creatures are wandering round the city, and besieging the offices of the Union authorities for aid.

If the Mississippi were opened, and the trade and commerce of the port revived, this condition of affairs would soon improve; but it is impossible for the starving to wait for these happy events.

The correspondent says that there are only three ways of relieving the distress of the New-Orleans poor: 1. From the City Treasury; 2. From the United States Treasury; 3. By continuing the levy of contributions upon rebels, and keeping the idle at work. The first means of supply is out of the question, for the City Treasury is empty. The General Government, even if it were advisable, cannot undertake to support these thirty thousand paupers. It has far more of that kind of work on hand already than it ought to have. We are feeding poor people of both colors in Virginia, in North Carolina, in Arkansas, in Tennessee and Mississippi, and almost everywhere that our armies are stationed. It is enough to bankrupt any treasury that is not exhaustless. The only possible way, if we are to undertake the tremendous job at all, is to make each place—the property of each place—support the paupers of that place. There are plenty of rich rebels, with plenty of property, yet in New-Orleans; and though it is a hard, and perhaps unauthorized thing, to take forcibly any part of their wealth for charitable uses, yet really this rebellion is a hard thing all round, and is making necessary many things highly improper in themselves; and those who brought it on cannot expect to escape their share of the hardship. There are men here who will cry out against the policy as unjust; but they would cry louder if the expense of supporting two or three hundred thousand Southern paupers were put upon them in the shape of taxes.

We must not allow the poor of New-Orleans to starve, while we are feeding the starving across the seas; and if Gen. BANKS does not see fit to carry out, in all respects, the policy of his predecessor, we think experience must have shown him the practical wisdom of BUTLER'S plans for the temporary relief of the public distress in his Department. Perhaps it would be worth while for Congress, before it adjourns, to pass some simple, comprehensive general law for the guidance of Union commanders in the South in this matter. The necessity of its application will, we trust, soon pass away; but, in the meantime, the necessities of the suffering are imperative.

MURFREESBORO AND VICKSBURGH.—It was within a few days of each other that the attacks were made upon Murfreesboro by Gen. ROSECRANS, and upon Vicksburgh by Gen. SHERMAN. The two battles were the closing scenes in the great and sanguinary drama of 1862. One of them had an auspicious issue, the other terminated disastrously. In one case the struggle is about to be renewed on the same ground; in the other apparently but a few miles further South.

Gen. ROSECRANS has not moved forward to attack the enemy again as rapidly as an impatient public anticipated. He has remained quiescent for over five weeks on the ground on which he fought and won. Of course he has had the best of reasons for doing so. His next advance will be more important than his last, involving more widely reaching consequences; and there must be as little risk about its success as possible. If it prove a victory at all, it must liberate East Tennessee, and carry the war down into Georgia. Our correspondence from ROSECRANS' army indicates that he is still actively engaged, training and preparing his soldiers for their task; just as he labored quietly for months in Nashville, training his men for the victory to which he led them. We have once or twice within the last fortnight had intelligence that he was on the eve of an advance, and the same news comes to us now again. Gen. ROSECRANS, however, has never heretofore advertised his purposes or plans, and, therefore, the correspondents may be mistaken in the matter by a week or two.

It was supposed that Gen. GRANT, too, would begin his assault upon Vicksburgh as soon as his whole army arrived near the city. It is very likely he will. But we learn that though he himself has arrived opposite the city, with nearly all his Memphis army, and joined it to the army of Gen. MCCLERNAND, there are still more troops being sent to him from the West. And there are still more needed. Vicksburgh, in many respects, is more difficult to operate against even than Charleston; and Gen. GRANT has no such vessels as the Monitors to aid him, nor would they be of much use to him if he had them. The navy may solve the problem at Charleston, but at Vicksburgh it must be solved by musketry and the bayonet. We trust that the Government will see that all the troops it can possibly furnish him will be sent without an hour's delay. His army is in a wretched place now, and almost anything is better than that it be allowed to remain inactive where it is for any length of time. It is to be hoped also that as soon as Vicksburgh falls our gunboats will at once sweep down the river and prevent the rebels from building any more Vicksburghs.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

Proposed Repayment of Moneys Expended in Raising Volunteers.

RELIEF FOR THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Mr. Dean's Bill to Amend the Metropolitan Police Law.

A NEW QUARANTINE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Feb. 10, 1863.

The bill reported by Senator FOLGER, "to authorize the levying of a tax upon the taxable property of the different towns and counties in this State, to repay moneys borrowed for, or expended in, the payment of bounties to volunteers, or for the expenses of their enlistment, or for aid to their families," has fourteen lengthy sections, giving effect to the objects set forth in the title, and, so far as the State at large is concerned, is the bill of the session. Every county in the State has memorialized the Legislature on this subject, and nearly as many separate bills have been noticed, to take the place of which this bill is designed.

The "Dummy" question promises to enlist a good degree of interest. It comes up on the petition of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, but all Companies using horses have a direct interest in it. Not only the residents and owners of property on the route of the Brooklyn City road, but on the route of the Hudson River Road, in New-York City, have very generally petitioned for the substitution of the "dummy" for horses. The Horse Railroad Committee will hold a session Friday next, at 10 A. M., for hearing what may be said for and against the proposed measure.

The Court of Appeals, overtasked and loaded down, has two measures of relief proposed in its behalf—both of them being amendments to the Constitution.

First—The concurrent resolutions by Mr. PRINDLE, in the House, which provides, from and after the third Tuesday in June, 1864, for six Judges to be chosen by the people; the four Judges then in office to continue till their terms expire. On the third Tuesday in May, 1864, two Judges shall be chosen, the term of one of whom shall expire in nine the other in eleven years. At the general election in 1865, and in every second year thereafter, one Judge shall be chosen for twelve years, from and after the 31st day of December next, after said election. Four Judges shall constitute a quorum, the Governor to designate, in cases of absence, one or more Justices of Supreme Court to serve for the time being; the Governor to appoint an extra Court of Appeals, and designate the judges, composed of eight Supreme Court Justices, as often as he shall deem necessary; said extra Court to have all the powers of the regular Court. Provision is made for compensation. Section 14, Article 6 of the Constitution is amended, so that the County Court shall have single, original and appellate jurisdiction, as the Legislature shall prescribe.

The second measure for the relief of the Court is the concurrent resolutions by Mr. FOLGER, in the Senate; provides that the Governor shall nominate to the Senate five Commissioners to hear and determine all appeals thus pending in the Court of Appeals,—one to be Chief Commissioner, and the Commissioners to hold their office until the causes transferred to them shall have been heard, to have the same pay as Judges of Court of Appeals.

Petitions are coming in praying for relief from the salt monopoly at Syracuse. Salt during the last season has ranged in price from $2 50 to $3 50 per barrel, which has afforded unusual profits—secured by the law under which the monopoly is organized, probably the greatest monopoly in this country. It is to be hoped that the petitioners will be permitted to be heard.

Mr. DEAN brought in his bill amending the Metropolitan Police bill, of which a brief synopsis has already been given—to which he did not wish to be considered as committed—and moved its reference to the members representing the Metropolitan Police District. Mr. DREW hoped not, and moved it to the Committee on Cities. Mr. SEYMOUR held the same view, and the bill went to the Standing Committee on Cities,—which meant that FERNANDO WOOD would not be allowed to have his way in a matter in which he is supposed to have a peculiar interest. The reference is understood to have been most in accordance with the wishes of Gov. SEYMOUR, who also has imbibed an interest in said bill.

The bill to incorporate the New-York and Brooklyn Baggage Company—generally classed among the "big things"—was reported by Mr. SEYMOUR in the House, when Mr. DARCY moved its reference to the Committee on Grievances, but it went to Cities. The Spring-street Railroad bill was also brought in by Mr. FREEMAN, was referred to Cities and took its place on the select list which certain ones carry in their pockets. Subsequently Mr. WARD moved its reference to the Railroad Committee and there it went. The vote, which was by ayes and nays, had a significance to those who understood it.

The bill relative to the Staten Island ferries is very likely to stir up the owners of the present lines. It gives to the Mayor, Comptroller and others, of New-York City, the right to grant franchises to new companies and regulate the same.

The Quarantine bill, introduced in the Senate by Mr. MURPHY, to establish a new Quarantine and define the duties of the Health Officer, is a thorough codification of that important subject. It provides that the quarantine establishment shall consist: 1. Of warehouses and wet-docks, to be constructed on Old Orchard Shoal, in the Lower Bay. 2. A floating hospital for yellow fever cases, to be anchored in Lower Bay. 3. A boarding station, to consist of a vessel, also in the Lower Bay, in which well persons may be transferred from infected vessels, who shall have the clothing and baggage disinfected preparatory to being given passage to the City. 4. An anchorage for infected vessels in the Lower Bay.

The bill provides for the appointment of Health Officer by the Governor and confirmation by the Senate, that his term of office shall be two years, and that his salary shall be $10,000. All present laws relative to the subject are repealed.

The Board of Quarantine Commissioners are continued as a permanent board, to whom is confided the duty of administering the law.

Senator COOK'S report adverse to paying the State dues in coin, is an able production. He maintains that it is strictly within the spirit of the contract which provides that payment shall be made in funds current in Albany. RODERICK.

EVENING SESSION.

The Assembly met at 7 o'clock, the special order being the resolutions of Judge DEAN in relation to arbitrary arrests.

Mr. PRINDLE took the floor, and made an elaborate argument in opposition to the resolutions, in justification of arbitrary arrests as a military necessity, and the vindication of the suspension and refusal of the writ of habeas corpus. He opposed the resolutions as dangerous and incendiary, and calculated to make issue between the General and State Governments. He vindicated Mr. LINCOLN'S Administration, and appealed to the loyalty of the Democrats to aid in crushing the rebellion, instead of criticising the acts of the Government.

Mr. TALLMAN commenced to reply, vindicating the Democracy from the charge of disloyalty. He gave way at 9¾ o'clock.

The resolutions were made the special order for Tuesday evening next. Adjourned.

IMPORTANT FROM VICKSBURGH.

How the Ram Queen of the West Ran Past the Rebel Batteries.

She Butts the Rebel Steamer Vicksburg Under the Batteries.

THE RAM MONARCH TO FOLLOW.

Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

AT THE MOUTH OF YAZOO RIVER, ON BOARD U. S. HOSPITAL SHIP RED ROVER, Feb. 3, Via CAIRO, Feb. 8.

At last, after a complete dearth of news of importance since the Arkansas and White River expeditions, we have interesting items to chronicle, which gives token of activity.

This morning at 5 o'clock, the Queen of the West, commanded by Capt. SUTHERLAND, with Col. ELLET, Commodore of the ram fleet, on board, left this river, and having passed down by the peninsula, in full sight of Vicksburgh, rounded the point and was under full headway down toward the city before she was discovered. The rebels then opened fire upon her with a number of their heaviest guns, and kept up a brisk cannonade, while she ran in toward the landing and fired shell into and twice severely butted the rebel steamer Vicksburgh, moored to the bank, directly under the river batteries.

Besides the time occupied in running down toward the city, she was fully ten minutes detained in making her assaults upon the steamer. Notwithstanding all this opportunity, and the close proximity to the rebel batteries and fire from them of 100 shot and shell, she was only hit twelve times, and it is said that not a person was injured. She continued down the river, and landed at the lower end of the canal, when Capt. SUTHERLAND landed and crossed the peninsula back to the river.

Col. ELLET continued down the river, his destination being watched. This movement will be followed up to-night by an attempt by the ram Monarch to make the same trip. These rams will be able to keep open the river for some distance, with the assistance of one or two iron-clads, whose commanders are soliciting the same privilege, and may soon be granted permission to run the blockade.

A large body of troops might thus be landed from flatboats upon the south side of Vicksburgh. If this cannot at present be done, direct communication of the besieged city with Texas and Louisiana can be cut off, and transports on Red and Ouchite Rivers can be captured or destroyed.

This will be a great gain, and the value of this pioneer achievement, therefore, relatively, as well as intrinsically, is very great.

We have had two flags of truce lately, one on the 31st and one later. The first was ostensibly to discover what had become of the rebel Colonel who is said to have disappeared. Another to demand possession of the woman now Capt. SUTHERLAND'S wife. The rebels were somewhat taken aback when informed that the lovely Mississippi widow had become the spouse of a hated Lincolnite, but they had to go home without her. Their real purpose was undoubtedly to obtain information.

I have seen and talked with officers engaged in the conflict of the ram with the batteries. They say it was impossible to count the rebel guns, but they seemed to be planted behind trees and houses, and rifle pits, with infantry using small arms. It was indeed a miracle that she escaped. She was under fire from half-past 6 to quarter past 7.

IMPORTANT FROM TENNESSEE.

LEBANON ENTERED BY OUR FORCES.

Capture of 600 Prisoners, Including Several Field Officers.

NASHVILLE, Tuesday, Feb. 10.

Our forces entered Lebanon, Tenn., on the 8th. They captured some 600 rebels, most of them being men of MORGAN'S Command. Many field officers were taken. Among the prisoners was PAUL ANDERSON, a violent rebel member of the State Legislature of 1860 and 1862. He was an original secessionist, and one of the earliest advocates for a Southern Confederacy.

Over 100 wounded reached here by cars from Murfreesboro to-night.

A number of Paymasters left for the front this morning.

The first train for Murfreesboro will leave here to-morrow.

The river is falling, though it is raining heavily. There is six feet of water on the shoals.

REBELLION WITHIN THE REBELLION.

The Confederates Resisted in Georgia.

THE INSURGENTS REPORTED VICTORIOUS.

Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.

MURFREESBORO, Tenn., Sunday, Feb. 8.

There is a speck of war in the Southern dominions, in quite an unexpected place. A number of people in Northern Georgia and Southwest North Carolina, have openly revolted against the rebel oligarchy, and have only been partially suppressed after considerable fighting and blood shed. Col. G. W. LEE, of the rebel army, commanding in the disaffected districts, issued an order, which filled the Atlanta Confederacy of Jan. 31, decrying the insurrectionary movement, warning the malcontents of its hopelessness, and offering them a free pardon if they would lay down their arms.

From the same paper, of Feb. 3, it seems the disaffected inhabitants refused to obey the Colonel's proclamation, and he proceeded against them with an armed force. The result is stated in the following letters by a correspondent of the Atlanta Confederacy:

FROM COL. LEE'S EXPEDITION.

HEADQUARTERS, DAHLONEGA, GA., Jan. 30, P. M.

To the Editors of the Confederacy:

I am happy to say that the expedition to Northeast Georgia is a success. The Colonel commanding brings to this duty, as well as all others, discretion and great activity. He is thoroughly supported by his command and the citizens generally. The Safety Committee of this village is entitled to great credit for their vigilance and perseverance in ferreting out and arresting many of the disorganizers. The safety of Dahlonega is due to the courage and determination of its citizens. A large number of insurgents having started from the mountains to it, from motives of revenge, and with the hope of rescuing their friends in jail, but finding the place to be strongly garrisoned, they became small by degrees, until it arrived within one mile of the town, and retreated in disorder to the mountains. About one hundred deserters have come in and been forwarded to their regiments, and as many are getting ready to go. A gang of wretched cut-throats went to Atlanta in irons Tuesday, and a similar crowd will leave in a day or two. A detail from the infantry battalion, mounted, under command of Capt. JENKINS, is just in, with nine prisoners, some of whom were taken with guns in hand, and their scouting parties, both infantry and cavalry, are still out. Col. LEE has assured the loyal people here that he will scour the whole country and arrest every disloyal man in a few days. This beautiful mountain country will resume its accustomed tranquillity."

Advices from some refugees who have heard of these troubles and had to leave, state that the above does not contain the whole, and other disturbances have broken out of a most alarming nature.

LATER.

A fight has occurred between the rebel forces and the malcontents in Georgia, with considerable loss on both sides. The rebels say they defeated the insurgents, and captured all their stores and guns. The affair occurred near Dahlonega.

A GALLANT AFFAIR.

Expedition into Texas by a Party of Loyal Kansas Indians—A Hundred Disloyal Indians Captured—Valuable Rebel Papers Secured, &c.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Feb. 10.

Indian Commissioner DOLE has received information that about a hundred loyal Delaware and Shawnee Indians, of Kansas, have taken the rebel Wachita Agency in Texas, killed LEOPER, the agent, and captured a hundred disloyal Indians, together with a large number of horses, papers and Confederate bonds. Among the papers are treaties made with the rebel government, and signed by ALBERT PIKE. The gallant party returned to Kansas in safety, with the loss of only four men.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Destruction of the Rappahannock Railroad Bridge.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Sunday, Feb. 8, 1863.

On Wednesday last, Col. MCINTOSH, of the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, with a respectable force, went up the Rappahannock on a reconnoissance, and returned last evening, having fully accomplished the object of the expedition.

All the fords and crossings were carefully examined, but no rebel troops were seen on this side of the river. The pickets of the command were on several occasions fired upon by bushwhackers, who succeeded in killing one trooper and wounding four others.

The railroad bridge recently constructed by the rebels was entirely demolished by our troops, and some valuable information was obtained during the reconnoissance. PAUL.

A Cavalry Reconnoissance to Warrenton.

WARRENTON, Va., Tuesday, Feb. 3, 1863.

Beyond all doubt the whole of that portion of Virginia north of the Rappahannock is to-day entirely rid of rebel soldiers. The bushwhackers, however, still remain to be disposed of, and before this is done they will, doubtless, as they have done before, make considerable trouble. Gen. WYNDHAM, with a command of five hundred cavalry, consisting of detachments of the First Virginia, Lieut. KREPPS, and Fifth New-York, Capt. KROM, visited this place last night and caused a score or so of the Black-Horse cavalrymen, who had been annoying the inhabitants of this place for several weeks past, to make a hasty retreat across the Rappahannock. After capturing a few prisoners and about one hundred stand of arms, Gen. WYNDHAM sent detachments to the Rappahannock Station, where it was rumored the rebels were constructing a pontoon bridge; to Brentsville and other points between that and Centreville; but no armed rebels were found. Previous to this Gen. WYNDHAM had disposed of the remains of WHITE'S guerrillas, who infested Aldie, Middleburgh and vicinity, so that now he can deal out summary justice to the bushwhackers. PAUL.

Amusements.

GERMAN OPERA.—In consequence of the grand masquerade ball of Arion Society taking place to-night, there will be no performance at the German Opera. To-morrow evening Mr. LOTTI takes his benefit, when FLOTOW'S popular opera of "Martha" will be played.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—A new version of PLANCHE'S celebrated burlesque, "The Fair One with the Golden Locks," was produced here on Monday evening with moderate success. It has been "adapted" by a local playwright on a new and thoroughly unsatisfactory plan, and has suffered moreover the addition of several verbose jokes and diffuse puns. The plan referred to consists in merging into one part—that sustained by MRS. JOHN WOOD—the dialogue and action of two or three different characters. A centipede would limp with two or three of its limbs chopped off, and a burlesque that seldom has too many legs to stand upon naturally suffers as far as movement is concerned, by a similar operation. Mrs. JOHN WOOD, who is thus heavily endowed, satisfies the audience by her charming presence and vivacious style of acting, but when she is not on the stage the work drags, notwithstanding much completeness of detail in dresses and scenery. The music is almost exclusively operatic, and in some instances—where Mr. WALCOT sings, for example—is too ambitious. The best morceaux, however, were rendered with neat effect by Mrs. JOHN WOOD and Mrs. SEDLEY BROWN—the latter a rising and talented actress—who wins her way steadily in public esteem. The caste in all general respects was thoroughly sufficient, and the piece, as we have before remarked, was a moderate success. Greatly excised, it will undoubtedly form an agreeable addition to Mrs. WOOD'S somewhat limited and entirely antiquated repertoire.

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Mr. ANSCHUTZ gave his first performance of German Opera at this establishment last evening to a fashionable and appreciative audience. The opera selected for the occasion was MOZART'S "Zauberflote"—the caste being the same as at the little establishment in Broadway. So many pleasant associations cling to the German experiment at Wallack's Theatre that it is hard to murmur at the acoustical shortcomings of that dilapidated building, but it must be confessed that Mr. ANSCHUTZ'S artists are heard to greater advange in Brooklyn than in New-York; their voices seem to be fuller, fresher and better balanced. The performance last evening was so excellent in all respects that it explained the success with which the company was greeted in Philadelphia—where it also enjoyed the advantage of a good house for sound and sight. Mr. ANSCHUTZ presided in the orchestra with his accustomed skill, and we venture to say that a better orchestra has never been heard in the City of Churches. The ensembles, as heretofore, were perfect—a specialty which belongs only to Mr. ANSCHUTZ'S company, and certainly cannot be claimed by any Italian organization.

On Saturday next the second performance of Mr. ANSCHUTZ'S short Brooklyn season will be given, when BEETHOVEN'S grand classic opera "Fidelio," will be played. No operatic revival of late years has been so successful as this. It will undoubtedly attract an overflowing house.

WINTER GARDEN.—On Monday evening Mr. EDWIN BOOTH commenced a short season at this theatre, opening in the character of Hamlet to a house overflowing with one of those peculiarly fashionable and intelligent audiences for which he seems to wear such a talisman of attraction. Mr. BOOTH is, perhaps, right in thus invariably selecting Hamlet for his opening part, his advantages of presence and his style of performance, dependent less on the display of physical power than on the carriage of the feelings and imagination into the action, rendering him the best representative we have of the character now upon the stage. In his rendering, the profound abstraction and overwrought sensibility, the moody waywardness of temper, whose sadness breaks off into melancholy mirthfulness, while the passionate outbursts of indignation and grief lapse into idle speculation—all the delicate lights and shades that make up the character find a beautiful portrayal; not that Mr. BOOTH is at all deficient in the only one scene in "Hamlet," in which personal address and accomplishments are required—the fencing bout with Laertes. He handles the foil with much dexterity, and plays his part in the passage of arms with a fire and elegance that may well challenge the compliments of the ring. The cast introduced, or rather restored to the New-York boards, in the character of Laertes, Mr. LAWRENCE BARRET, a young actor, who some two or three seasons ago gave every promise of future excellence. The part of Laertes is, perhaps, one of the most ungracious in the drama, but where opportunities offered, Mr. BARRETT, in every sense, justified the liberal expectations of his friends. Mrs. WILKINSON as the Queen, and Mr. MORRIS as Polonius, merited and received much applause. This evening Mr. BOOTH will appear as Othello.

THE LIGHT GUARD BALL.—To find a tiger on Thursday evening, it will be necessary to look for him in the Academy of Music, where, in the midst of a delightful jungle of crinoline and beauty, he will be found purring as gently as any domestic creature. Strange as this intelligence may sound, it need excite no undue apprehension, for there will be hundreds, we might say thousands, there to look after the animal who, we may add, by way of precaution, can always be told by its coat, and so avoided. Alas! the best and most beautiful prefer to rush on to destruction. They do not desire to avoid the Tigers. The warrior beckons and the maiden galops off by his side.

This brings us to the bare statement of the fact that the Light Guard Ball—familiarly known as the Tiger Ball—comes of on Thursday night at the Academy of Music. That it will be the most brilliant affair of the season; that women who are all fair, and men who are all brave, will mingle as in poetry, and make the hours extatic; that the music will drop like blessed balsam on the stiffened limbs of aged beaux, compelling them to dance again; that for the mere looker-on there will be the atmosphere of youth and love, and the apartment called, by way of pleasant fiction, the supper room; that for the disappointed, the wilted, the jilted and the be-miffed, there are cabmen outside to thrash; that for the beatified, contented and triumphant, there is an outer Paradise called DELMONICO'S; that the Ball, in a word, will be up to the standard of past years, and perhaps taller, is beyond reasonable doubt, or rational peradventure. Of course it will also be successful. The arrangements this year seem to prohibit anything like discomfort, even if the crush is greater than it has ever been—a result which is expected.

MAP OF CHARLESTON.—Messrs. G. & G. W. BLUNT have just issued an excellent map of "Charleston and Vicinity," The topography of contiguous country for fifty miles around is given. But its chief value is the very admirable presentation of the hydrography of the approaches to this city, marked with that accuracy which distinguishes the maps of Messrs. BLUNT. The channels, forts, batteries, lighthouses, shoals, etc., are all down. The publication is a timely one, in view of approaching operations against the original home of treason.

No. 42 FIFTH-ST., NEW-YORK, June 25, 1862.

DR. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: I take pleasure in testifying to the remarkable skill and judgment you displayed in the case of my daughter, who had been partially deaf, accompanied by discharge from the ears, since early infancy, and is now, thanks to your treatment, able to hear as well as any one, while her ears are free from the discharge. Although it is nearly two years since she has been under your care, her hearing remains as good, and her ears as sound, as the day she left you.

CATARRH CURED.

From Rev. P. R. Russell, Lynn, Mass.

I have been much troubled with catarrh of the worst type for some twenty years. It gradually grew worse, producing cough and hoarseness, destroying the sense of smell, and breaking down my general health to such a degree as to compel me to resign my pastorate, and suspend public speaking.

I made diligent use of the usual remedies, such as snuffs of different kinds, nitrate of silver, tar water, olive tar and inhalations, but without any very salutary effects. Last Summer I heard of Dr. Lighthill's successful mode of treating catarrh, visited him, and put myself under his treatment. I began immediately to improve, and this improvement has gone on to the present time. My catarrh has gradually melted away, my cough has disappeared, my voice has become natural, and I am once more able to preach the blessed Gospel. Let me advise all troubled with catarrhal difficulties to apply to Dr. Lighthill.

P. R. RUSSELL.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 1, 1862.

No. 740 WATER-ST., NEW-YORK, June 5, 1862.

Dr. Lighthill has succeeded in completely restoring my hearing, which was seriously impaired, although previous to applying to him I was treated by several physicians without the least benefit. Any further information I should be pleased to render on application to me at my residence, No. 173 Second-st., Brooklyn, E. D., or at my place of business, No. 740 Water-st.

WM. H. WATERBURY.

NEW-YORK, July 28, 1862.

I hereby certify that I have suffered during many years from trouble in hearing; one ear at last became entirely deaf, and the other so bad as to render conversation very difficult. I applied to Dr. Lighthill, of No. 34 St. Mark's-place, who, in a short time, and without pain, restored to me the use of my ears, so that I can now hear perfectly well. J. BISCO, No. 158 East 23d-st.

METROPOLITAN HOTEL, NEW-YORK, April 1, 1862.

DEAR SIR: I take much pleasure in testifying to the professional skill exhibited by you in your treatment of a case of severe inflammation of the throat and ear with which I have lately been afflicted. Upon coming under your charge I was immediately relieved and speedily cured of a most aggravated complaint, which several physicians had previously sought in vain to mitigate.

As I am somewhat of a stranger in the City, I would state that you are at liberty to substantiate my statements, if necessary, by reference to my relatives, Mr. A. V. Stout, President of the Shoe and Leather Bank of New-York, and to Mr. Everett Clapp, of the Western Transportation Company, No. 1 Coenties-slip.

With much esteem, I am, sir,
Your obedient servant.
FRED. M. HANKS.

THE LOVING LILLIPUTIANS

WARREN-THUMBIANA.

Marriage of General Tom Thumb and the Queen of Beauty.

Who They Are, What They Have Done, Where They Came from, Where They Are Going.

Their Courtship and Wedding---Ceremonies, Presents, Crowds of People.

THE RECEPTION---THE SERENADE.

Those who did and those who did not attend the wedding of Gen. Thomas Thumb and Queen LAVINIA WARREN composed the population of this great Metropolis yesterday, and thenceforth religious and civil parties sink into comparative insignificance before this one arbitrating query of fate—Did you or did you not see Tom Thumb married?

The Scriptures tell us that a little matter kindleth a great flame, and that being the case, no one need be surprised that two little matters should create such a tremendous hullabaloo, such a furore of excitement, such an intensity of interest in the feminine world of New-York and its neighborhood, as have the loves of our Lilliputians. We say "feminine world," because there were more than twenty thousand women in this City yesterday morning up and dressed an hour and a half before their usual time, solely and simply because of the approaching nuptials of Mr. STRATTON and Miss WARREN. They didn't all have cards of admission, oh no, but it wasn't their fault. Fathers were flattered, husbands were hectored, brothers were bullied and cousins were cozened into buying, begging, borrowing, in some way or other getting tickets of admission to the grand affair.

The marriage of Gen. Tom Thumb cannot be treated as an affair of no moment—in some respects it is most momentous. Next to LOUIS NAPOLEON, there is no one person better known by reputation to high and low, rich and poor, than he.

THUMB WAS BORN,

(so runs the legend,) of poor but honest parients, on the 4th of February, 1838, in the pleasant burgh of Bridgeport, Conn. At his birth he weighed nine pounds and a half, so that he bid fair to become a bouncing boy. He grew steadily until he attained the age of eighteen months, when nature put a veto on his upward progress, and ordered him forever afterward to remain in statu quo. When he was two years old, persons fancied that he had not grown an inch for some time; measures were resorted to for the purpose of ascertaining his stationary condition, but although in every other respect he improved with rapidity, not a hair's breadth was added to his stature. Calisthenics couldn't help him, and

"Physicians were in vain."

That he was no longer, no shorter, no heavier, but much handsomer, was accredited to him by every one. His appetite increased, he never complained of illness, but partook freely of ordinary food, enjoyed refreshing sleep, and has always enjoyed perfect health, with the exception of those slight colds to which the most robust are liable. His parents have had other children, who are of the ordinary size. In fact, there is nothing in his history or appearance, or in that of his family, which furnishes the slightest clue to the astonishing phenomena which are presented by his miniature features and frame.

He kept up his growing operations only till he had attained the height of thirty-one inches, and the weight of twenty-nine pounds. At the age of ten or thereabouts. Mr. BARNUM, the Museumite found him out, and brought him out, and has kept him out ever since. His tour through the States, through England and over the Continent are matters of record in the newspapers and of remembrance with the elders of our community, but for the benefit of our youthful readers we will state, that the little General, (who was christened Tom Thumb after the little Skeezicks of the Fairy Tale with whom all children are of course familiar,) met with the most unbounded success here, was greeted with affectionate enthusiasm and enthusiastic affection by the Queen of England, was courted and fêted by LOUIS PHILLIPPE and his suite, was treated most handsomely by every one with whom he came in contact, and came home laden with gifts the exponents of royal favor, and with pockets filled with yellow-boys. Since then he has remained at ease with his parents in Bridgeport, living on his money, conducting himself with eminent propriety, and developing into a good citizen, a sensible man, a good fellow generally.

THE QUEEN OF BEAUTY,

Miss LAVINIA WARREN BUMP, is a native of Middleboro', Massachusetts, where she was born on the 31st of October, 1842. She too is the child of ordinarily sized persons, and has brothers and sisters of customary dimensions. She has, however, a little sister, MINNIE WARREN, who though sixteen years of age, is the smallest woman in the world. Of her, more anon. The little queen, until she became one year old, grew as children generally do at that age, but from that time she increased in stature slowly, and ceased growing entirely when she was ten years of age. She attended school regularly, and found no difficulty in keeping up with the members of her classes. At home, her mother taught her to sew, knit, cook and do all manner of housework, making her really a good housekeeper. She also has a knowledge of fancy work, practiced by ladies who have the leisure to devote themselves to it. She is, in a word, an accomplished lady—intelligent, pleasant, modest and agreeable. She is very lively in conversation, and speaks with all the confidence, and even wit, of an accomplished and talented woman. She is fond of poetry, music, eloquence, and the fine arts generally; indeed, she is quite as charming mentally as she is physically. Her eye is bright, her smile sweet, her hair dark, and her figure perfection itself.

Really, she, so far as she goes, is externally all that the most fastidious of the lords of creation could desire, and if all that is told of her feminine virtues be correct, she will prove to the gallant TOM a treasure far better than greenbacks, and one which moth can't corrupt, though thieves might possibly steal her.

But a few months since she was discovered by Mr. BARNUM, and though on the eve of departure for Europe, engaged herself to him for a brief exhibition at the Museum. While at Boston she was INTRODUCED TO THE GENERAL.

She encountered her destiny—she met her "gray-eyed man." TOM, while gazing at her through the chill atmosphere of Boston, alternately shivered and quivered. He literally fell desperately in love with her, and vowed his little vows, backed by the sternest of oaths. Commodore NUTT was also in a condition which school-girls entitle "cracked." He forgot the disparity of age, and thought only of the charms of his admiration. He grew pale, thin and melancholy, for a while, but like most men, soon recovered his spirits, and became the staunch friend again of the high contracting parties. The General and the Queen loved wisely, and after consultation with their mutual friend, protector and exhibitor, Mr. BARNUM, determined to do nothing rashly, but to submit the entire matter, with all due respect, to Mr. and Mrs. BUMP. Inquiries concerning the "life and character of Gen. T. Thumb," met with favorable responses, and the parental consent was given, the plighted troth was made, the ante-bridal preparations, and the advertisements of

"Only one week,

were put forth.

It can't be worth while to allude, or more than allude, to the thousand-and-one attentions paid by Mr. STRATTON to the bride-elect; he did just as any other man would do under like circumstances, with the possible exception that his admiration was an all-time affair, public as well as private.

It was at first determined to make the affair strictly a private one, but the public desire was so great to see them that Mr. BARNUM, who has kept modestly in the back ground, was compelled to yield to the pressure. Bishop POTTER, the venerable prelate who supervises the doings of the Episcopacy of this Diocese, was the clergyman selected for the performance of the ceremony. After a personal inspection of the Lilliputianic pair the Bishop consented, and named Trinity Chapel as the place. Rev. Mr. DIX, recently appointed Rector of Trinity Parish, didn't see the propriety of the Bishop's decree, and put down his foot, vetoeing the use of the church for the purpose. His reasons, whether mental, moral or physical, have not as yet been made public, nor do we imagine there is the least curiosity regarding them. Another church was readily found, and the arrangements for the wedding went smoothly on, until the Bishop discovered that there was "too much publicity given to the affair," and backed out from the agreement, but his place was supplied.

Every artisan of New-York, every tradesman of Gotham, thought it would be a fine opportunity to obtain a little gratuitous advertising, and rushed frantically into the presentation line; snobs and nabobs followed suit, and the town rang with vague reports of the richness, the elegance, the superlative magnificence of the presents given by Messrs. this, that or the other, to the dear little Queen of Beauty.

Regardless of all this, Time moved slowly but steadily on. The day approached, it dawned magnificently, and with the glad warmth of Springtime in its rays.

THE WEDDING

took place yesterday, at 12½ o'clock, in Grace Church, on Broadway, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Mr. WILEY, of Bridgeport, Connecticut, assisted by the Rev. Dr. TAYLOR, of this City. The Church was comfortably filled by an audience comprising representatives of each and every strata of New-York's respectable society. There were very many elegantly dressed ladies, and quite as many who paid but little respect either to the request of the inviter, the customary rules of etiquette, or the obvious proprieties of the occasion. It can hardly be considered the correct thing to newspaperize the presence of private individuals, however conspicuously placed or dressed, but the appearance of Maj.-Gen. BURNSIDE we may mention with propriety. The gallant soldier looked well and hearty, and received the evident regard of the audience with ease and dignity. There were but few reserved seats, the entire church edifice being open to the guests, with the exception of a few seats reserved for the bridal suite, and friends of the parties.

Previous to the entrance of the bridal party, Mr. MORGAN relieved the weary waiters by performing, as few beside him can, the following upon the organ: Overture to William Tell, Overture to Oberon, Grand March of Tannhauser, Selection from Meyerbeer, Voluntary. Frequent cries of "They come!" started each and every one upon his feet, but until the hand indicated the hour of half after twelve, there were no signs of the little ones.

At last

THEY CAME.

Preceding them was the self-possessed, the self-poised, the shrewd-eyed, kindly-faced BARNUM—BARNUM, the Prince of Showmen, the manager of the affair, which is, in his own word, "the biggest little thing that was ever known." After the General and the Queen, followed Com. NUTT, the groomsman, and Miss MINNIE WARREN, the bridesmaid. An instantaneous uprising ensued; all looked, few saw; many stood upon the seats, others stood upon stools placed on the seats; by many good breeding was forgotten, by very many the sanctity of the occasion and the sacredness of the ceremonies were entirely ignored. As the little party toddled up the aisle a sense of the ludicrous seemed to hit many a bump of fun and irrepressible and unpleasantly audible giggle ran through the church.

After a moment's reflection, the most absolute silence was maintained and the bride and groom, supported by the bridesmaid and groomsman, stood upon an elevated platform facing the altar, where stood the officiating ministers.

TOM THUMB

Looked cheerfully serene in full evening dress; his hair was curled and frizzled; his appearance that of a little old man in whom the juices of life were yet rich, and whose jolly days were not yet done.

QUEEN LAVINIA

Appeared, soberly speaking, to great advantage. Her head was overladen by the absurdities of fashion, and her hair-rig generally was not marked with good taste, but her tout ensemble, her whole, was singularly attractive. Her dress was of rich white satin made décolleté, the skirt trailing half a yard and trimmed with bouillonnes of satin tulle and applique, the lace flounce nearly the depth of half a yard. The corsage bridal veil was to match. Her hair was arranged in front and releve in double rolls, the back forming the outspread wings of a butterfly, lengthened as to almost touch the ears in the centre of these was placed the chute d'eau. The point lace bridal veil was tastefully entwined in three elaborate bandeaux, and was surmounted in front by a diamond star corresponding with the set of diamonds worn by the bride, over which was a crescent (or half) wreath of natural orange blossoms. The bouquet de corsage was of natural flowers in star design, as was also the bride's bouquet. This differed from most star bouquets, from the fact that the spaces were left open between the points and edges gracefully fringed. White satin slippers with rosettes of white satin, trimmed with seed pearls and lace, and a point lace handkerchief, completed the bride's petite and very tasteful costume. Her jewels attracted much attention. The brooch consisted of a cluster in form of a star. The ear-rings are solitaries with pear shaped pendants. The veil was fastened with two diamond hair-pins, with three pendants to each. The bracelets correspond with the brooch, and are of star design. The necklace was superb, forming leaves of diamonds, each diamond and accompanying pendant resembling sparkling dew-drops.

Altogether she seemed exceedingly pretty, and her manner, like that of the General, was quiet, modest and proper.

MISS MINIE WARREN.

The bridesmaid, is the dearest little duck of a creature on the face of the globe. She is sweet sixteen and short; her face is pretty, her form good, her manners pleasing, and her natural ability above mediocrity. She was dressed in a white silk skirt with a white illusion over-dress, trimmed half-way up the skirt with bouillions of the same material dotted with pink rosebuds. The corsage was decolletté with berthio to match. Her hair was curled and ornamented with a wreath of pink buds. She wore a diamond necklace, ear-rings and brooch of plain pattern but very rich, and conducted herself with the most absolute propriety.

looked ill. The absurd reports concerning his jealousy and all that are grounded upon an exceedingly ill-bred habit of jesting at the expense of others, in which some people delight to indulge. He probably had a little "round pain," and needed not that the "collect for the day" should be read as a reminder of his misery. He was dressed like the General, and behaved as well.

The service was performed in the usual manner, the responses being given by the happy pair in tones distinct and audible, without flush, flourish or nonsense. They were married as they should be, and all things were done decently and in order.

The bride was given away by the Rev. Dr. PALMER, of Middleboro, with grace and dignity, and the gift was accepted by the gallant General, with every indication of grateful joy.

After the Benediction was pronounced, the General honestly kissed his wife, and in the presence of the entire audience bestowed upon her the "killing glance" with which he has, in days gone by, captivated so many millions of equally susceptible damsels.

After a moments' tarrying, while MORGAN's organ rolled out the delicious reminiscences of MENDELSSOHN's "Wedding March," they marched down the aisle arm in arm, and man and wife.

Long before the hour appointed for the ceremony, a great concourse had gathered and that portion of Broadway between Union-square and Ninth-street was literally crowded, if not packed, with an eager and expectant populace. All classes of society were represented, not excluding the "spectacle man" and the woman retailer of apples. As the time approached for the ceremony of the nuptials, the crowd increased in density, every one exhibiting the most impatient desire to catch a glimpse at the happy pair when they should arrive. All the buildings in the vicinity of the church were made subservient to the general curiosity, and not a door, or window, or balcony, which would in the least facilitate view, but was put into practical service. The smiling faces of the thousands of fair ladies thus assembled contributed not a little to the attractiveness and joyfulness of the occasion. The system of police was admirably executed. Order was preserved throughout the entire proceedings, and a general good feeling seemed to exist among the people. Stages, and all vehicles excepting the carriages which contained invited guests and holders of tickets, were turned off Broadway at Ninth-street below the church, and at Twelfth-street above. In the intermediate space, and near each sidewalk, were stationed lines of policemen, who succeeded in maintaining their position until nearly noon, when the multitude became so vast that they were obliged to form new lines nearer the centre of the street. The open space was then hardly of sufficient width to admit of the free passage of carriages, but the drivers threaded their way through, notwithstanding the slight inconveniences which opposed them. To place a correct estimate upon the number of carriages that passed through the line, unless a person stood by and counted them one by one, would be impossible. There was one unbroken chain of them for over two hours preceding the arrival of the "little couple."

From the steps of the church to the outer edge of the walk was spread a single width of tapestry. Upon each side stood a file of policemen, and at the lower end were stationed three others whose special duty was to assist the guests in alighting from their carriages. That they appreciated the pleasant task was evident from the happy expression of their countenances and the genial suavity of their manners.

At 12 o'clock the carriage containing the bride and bridegroom; also, Commodore NUTT and the sister of the bride, came rolling along very much to the relief of the outsiders. When the carriage had stopped, a general rush was made to get nearer it. Curiosity and excitement seemed to be unbounded for the time, and it was with the most strenuous exertions that the policemen could hold in check the determined and resolute crowd. It was not until the party had passed into the church that the confusion could be quieted and order restored. The crowd remained patient for the succeeding half hour, at the expiration of which time the marriage ceremony was completed and Mr. and Mrs. STRATTON—formerly Tom Thumb and LAVINIA WARREN—preceded by the bridemaid and bridesman, again made their appearance to take the carriage. Another jam, another pressure and another stampede, was the consequence. The former eagerness of the multitude was again manifest, and did not even subside when the carriage had got several blocks off. It is not necessary to mention here of the shouts and yells and screeches with which the junior portion of the throng hailed the happy couple as they entered and left the church. Although it may seem ridiculous, yet it is nevertheless true, that hundreds of persons, including adults, ran after the carriage, not diminishing their speed until the Metropolitan Hotel had been reached.

The appearance of Broadway between the church and the hotel was similar to that observed on the day of the cable celebration. The sidewalks were crowded, and the windows of the buildings on each side were thronged. The centre of attraction was in the vicinity of the Metropolitan Hotel, whither the married pair had arrived, and at which place the reception was to be given.

THE MASS OUTSIDE THE HOTEL.

Policemen were detailed to preserve order in the vicinity of the hotel, as well as of the church. Venicles were turned off the main thoroughfare at Houston and Spring streets, and the long line of carriages which was noticed at the church, came pouring down toward the place of reception. The crowd followed, and in less than fifteen minutes the street in front of the hotel block was completely choked with human beings. Upon each side of the hotel entrance was displayed the American colors, as was also the National flag upon the roof of the building. The inmates of the carriages, as they alighted, were closely scrutinized by the outsiders, many of whom naturally envied the good fortune which entitled their inferior, perhaps, in social standing to congratulate the married party. Pickpockets, as usual, were busy plying their avocation. Two of that "genteel profession," however, were discovered in the act, and taken to the station-house.

The crowd, becoming convinced that they might possibly have to wait longer than would be agreeable to see the objects of their curiosity, wisely concluded to disperse, but not until they had witnessed the last of the carriages. In the course of a few hours the stages were allowed to proceed by the hotel, and between that time and evening the world in that quarter seemed to revolve after its accustomed method.

The breath-expurgating, crinoline-crushing, bunion-pinching mass of conglomerated humanity that rushed eagerly to view other portions of the all-absorbing ceremonies, likewise congregated at the late residence of the Japanese Princes—the scene of the great Japanese ball—the ball of balls. Of course, the élite, the crème de la crème, the upper ten, the bon ton, the select few—the very F. F.'s of the City—nay, of the country—together with many, very many, of what are called "citizens generally," found means of being present to view the Lilliputian welcome. The friends of the Messrs. LELANDS—whose name is legion—stowed themselves in every available nook and corner of the house, and lined the passageways from the hall to the bridal chamber with rows of peering, anxious, inquisitive and expectant eyes—whose gauntlet few could run without the stoutest of hearts and steadiest of nerves.

Now, the General—by which we mean the happy bridegroom, Tom Thumb—or CHARLES STRATTON, Esq., —while he is not celebrated as a PASCAL, a GROTIUS, a KIRK WHITE, a COLBURN, or an Admirable CRICHTON—if he knows anything, knows what's what in a crowd. He—if any one—can endure the flashing artillery of ten thousand eyes—the running fire of ten thousand comments—the bombardment with admiring exclamations, which the hero of such a scene must endure. He, therefore, looked, not unusually astonished—nor remarkably surprised—but as pleased and joyful, and smiling, and jolly as the happiest of happy bridegrooms might, when he finally reached the Metropolitan Hotel, and toddled through the crowd and climbed the stairs, gallantly helping up his bride, and keeping close at the heels of the sturdy M. P.'s, who portentously cleared the way—the avant couriers of diminutive greatness. Then the crush of crinoline, the jostling jam, the skeleton-compressing crowd—enlivened tenfold by the excitement of the moment—swarmed in the passageways and stairways of the house, greeting the pigmy pair with welcome words, with God-speeds, and mirthful comments, and imposing exclamation points. The even more wonderfully infinitessimal apppearance of the bridesmaid, Miss MINNIE, and the automic groomsman, Commodore NUTT—the $30,000 Nutt—but heightened the interest, increased the wonder, and revivified the already compact mass of wondering spectators. Every vision was strained to obtain the earliest and latest view of the dwarfy couple, who pursued the even tenor of their way, diligently climbing the stairs, until at last they disappeared in the sanctum sanctorum of the bridal chamber, to prepare for the

AFTER THE CEREMONY,

which comprised the most interesting exercises of the succeeding two hours. The spacious parlors of the Metropolitan were all thrown open to the guests, who had assembled in large numbers even previous to the arrival of the microscopic hosts, and kept pouring in as rapidly as the disentangling of the almost inextricable mass of carriages at the church would permit. There was no special as, after entering the favored precincts of the reception-rooms, the guests were at liberty to pursue the bent of their inclinations, it was amusing to stand at the head of the staircase and witness the perpetual bewilderment of the newcomers as they reached the top step, and looked inquiringly about with a view to see what was the best method of seeing all that was to be seen. All were left to find out as best they could, and generally proceeded to circulate at a venture among the motley crowd; for such a confusion of toilettes is unparalleled except in the confusion of tongues at the Tower of Babel.

The veu d'œil of the assemblage was novel and pleasing, and presented a cosmopolitan as well as Metropolitan vraisemblance, but rarely to be seen. The exquisite and the artisan, the lady of twenty and the lady of fifty, the habiliments of street, dining-room, drawing-room, and almost of nursery, commingled in charming confusion, out-Barnuming BARNUM in their unsurpassed conglomeration of all specimens of numanity. The weary minutes seemed hours while the tiny couple were making their toilettes, and in the meanwhile the main interest centered in the which, vigilantly guarded by stout policemen, were to be seen in the whilom reading room—now transformed into a gay and festive scene. The main attraction was, of course, the jewelry case, with the contributions from BALL & BLACK'S, TIFFANY'S, and others; the exquisite confectionery tower from PARKINSON'S caramel depot; the munificent bridal cake, with its delightful four cupids or quarterus; the gorgeous fruits and delicious wines in the cornucopia basket, from No. 585 Broadway; the fragrant bouquet from GEO. BROWN; the neatly carved easy chair from No. 547 Broadway; the costly set of ermine from C. G. GUNTHER; the fans from Mrs. CRIPPS, and an incog. lady; the pair of slippers from EDWIN BOOTH; the set of charms from AUGUST BELMONT; the coral jewelry from J. A. CLARK; the pearl ring from Mr. MOTT; the locket and chain from Mrs. BELMONT; the wonderful bird watch; the full tea set of five silver pieces lined with gold, from Mrs. JAMES GORDON BENNETT; the silver watch and cups from Mrs. LIVINGSTON; and ad libitum silver spoons, castors, forks, nut pickers and napkin rings enough to make the newly married humming birds sing most discordant notes when the United States tax gatherer comes to collect the Government tax on plate. The tax alone on such a mass of silver and gold is enough to make even the minature Crœsus and his wife feel poor. But among the presents we must not forget the elegantly carved, neatly mounted billiard table, with the inlaid cues and minute balls—the very balls, by the way, that the famed BERGER played with during his exhibitions in this City. The entire establishment is valued at $400, and is in every way calculated for the convenient exercise of the recipients in the healthful game of billiards. The gift is accompanied by copies of PHELAN'S Manual of Billiards, so that if the General and his wife don't know how to play they can soon learn.

Then there were also the following:

The miniature silver horse and chariot by TIFFANY & Co. The venicle is ornamented with rubies. The eyes of the charger being garnet. The whole is in the chastest style of filiagree work and is a model of beauty and art. Dr. HENRY RAILTONS, a magnificent church service, mounted in gold. A set of silver salt cellars, with silver castor, presented by Mrs. STRATTON. Mrs. QUACKENBOSS, a set of coffee spoons, silver, plated with gold. C. A. PHELPS, set of salt cellars and spoons. MADAME TILMANS, head-dress of white feathers elegantly worked, the head-piece forming a butterfly. A similar head-dress, composed of red feathers, was presented by the same lady to Miss MINNIE WARREN, all of which were very nice, excepting the common affair of a cradel with which some person of little wit and less modesty encumbered the table.

The buzz of conversation was soon hushed by the news which rapidly spread through the room—"They are coming," and there was a general rush to see the Brobdignagian (!) bride and groom descend the stairs and proceed to the reception rooms. They

CAME TRIPPING DOWN THE STEPS,

And melted like quicksilver through the yielding crowd, which rained down upon them a shower of compliments and a storm of searching glances. "Isn't she pretty?" "How graceful!" "How beautiful!" "How queenly!" "How matronly!" "How charming!" "Dear little creatures!" "Was there ever anything so lovely?" "Was there ever such a picture?" "Isn't it nice?" "What a manly bearing he has!" "It's like a fairy scene!" "Isn't it wonderful?" "Did you ever?" &c., &c. Amid all of which, piloted by the smiling BARNUM, the smiling twins—for such they seemed, were eventually guided to their pedestal—the piano—on which they were speedily raised by the athlete DIBBLE, and all was ready for

with a nod, or a shake of the head, as the circumstances might prompt. The General and his lady had a smile and a bow for all, and manifested so much spirit, gaiety and life, that all were charmed beyond measure; in fact, Mr. and Mrs. STRATTON acted as if they had been in the habit of being married. The veteran Commodore NUTT occupied his position on the right of the groom, and the petite MINNIE WARREN on the left of the bride, with becoming gravity, and were likewise the centre of attraction. Of course there were many suggestions that they would form the next match, to all of which they replied good-naturedly.

THE RECEPTION WAS A SUCCESS,

as, of course, it was expected to be when BARNUM was the head and front of the offending. The brilliant assemblage, the delicious music, the merry laughter, the surging sea of laces, tulle, silk, satin, broadcloth, moire antique, muslin, velvet, furs and fine feathers of every imaginable hue and material, have been unsurpassed even in the gorgeous halls of the Metropolitan. All that the Messrs. LELANDS could do for the guests was done, and if a hundred or so did accidentally stray into the dining room, it seemed to be considered in the programme. All was hilarity, jocularity, fun, amusement and the acme of enjoyment, down to the happy moment when the twain retired.

THE SERENADE.

At 10½ o'clock P. M., a band of music, consisting of eight pieces, congregated in front of the Metropolitan Hotel, and played "The Land of the Brave and the Home of the Free." About five hundred people were soon collected, and shortly afterward the Lilliputian pair appeared upon the balcony, to the great delight of the crowd below. When the music had ceased, Gen. THUMB bowed his acknowledgments to the assemblage and said "Good night all." His bride then advanced and waved a kiss to the company, after which the bridal pair retired.

It is understood that the little General and his wife will proceed to Washington to-morrow. They will remain in that city for a few days, and then proceed to their home at Bridgeport, Conn., where they will hold a recention. In about two weeks they will sail for England, in which country they will doubtless receive the special favor of Queen VICTORIA. The General will be attended by his valet and the bride by her newly-appointed maid.

DEMOCRATIC UNION ASSOCIATION.

SPEECH OF JOHN VAN BUREN.

Secession Leaders in the Wrong---The War Must be Prosecuted---No Mediation---Die First, &c.

The Headquarters of the Democratic Union Association, corner of Broadway and Twenty-second-street, were crowded last evening, to listen to an address from Mr. JOHN VAN BUREN. Although the house was full at 7½ o'clock, neither officers nor speaker appeared until 8¾ o'clock, at which time the audience, becoming impatient, called for a few brief remarks from Commodore NUTT, Gen. Thumb, "or any other man." While these calls were loudest, Mr. VAN BUREN appeared, and was greeted with enthusiastic cheering. He was accompanied to and on the platform by Mr. LUKE COZZENS, President, Mr. JAS. B. MURRAY, H. S. CLINTON, Esq., Prof. MASON and Judge PARKER, of Albany, all of whom were seated beside the speaker.

Mr. VAN BUREN was introduced by the President, and when the renewed cheering had ceased, he commenced his address. He was always pleased to meet with his Democratic friends at any time, and particularly so after an election. [Applause.] He was not a member of the Association from which he had received the invitation to speak, but, so far as he had been informed of the objects for the attainment of which it had been organized, he thought favorably of them. When he had met his Democratic friends last in public, the occasion was one of mutual congratulations on the result of the State elections. Some time had elapsed since then, and he thought it well for them to gather together again, and see how they had progressed. There were sometimes occasions when men worked together, and voted together, who never worked or voted together before, and might never do so again. The last election was one of those occasions upon which men and parties, formerly opposing each other, had worked and voted for the same ticket, and with the same objects in view; and he sincerely hoped that they might be able to do so again. The Association had been addressed by Mr. BROOKS and by Mr. Cox, on which occasion he, Mr. VAN BUREN, was not present, and in speaking to them, he wished it distinctly understood, that he spoke simply for himself, not as the representative of any man or party.

previous to the last election, all branches of the democratic party, with the Old Whigs, nominated Hon. HORATION SEYMOUR, as their Candidate for Governor, while the Republicans and Abolitionists nominated Gen. WODSWORTH. The Abolitionists held a meeting at Cooper's Institute, at which HIRAM BARNEY arose and told the Custom House Officers in the pit to give three cheers for our next Governor, just come from the war. (Laughter and Applause.) Gen. WODSWORTH, the speaker believed, was at the first battle of Bull Run, and if it took him from the date of that memorable battle to the time when Mr. BARNEY announced his return, he thought Gen. WADSWORTH, at least, should not complain of the delays of Gen. MCCLELLAN. [Laughter and cheers for Gen. MCCLELLAN.] After the State of New-York, in its desire to aid in the successful prosecution of the war, refused to take from the army so able an officer as Gen. WADSWORTH, and chose another gentleman for Governor, he then heard that the General was going to the front, which was to have been expected, after the election. [laughter.] And, finally, when our army turned its face from Fredericksburgh toward Washington, true enough Gen. WADSWORTH was in front of them—he was and had for some time been in Washington. [Applause.] And when he heard that Gen. WADSWORTH had passed through this City, on his way to the front, without the people knowing it, he was surprised, and, during his surprise, had asked his Republican friends why they had allowed so gallant an officer to pass through the City without giving him the compliment of a serenade. [Laughter and applause.] But he would not speak longer of the past. He thought it well to look at the present condition of the country, and consider the future, in doing which he would remind them he only spoke for himself—not for any other man. He had said that in the last election men had worked together who previously had not. Gov. SEYMOUR was what was known among Democrats as an Old Hunker, while he (the speaker,) was an unqualified Barn-burner. In refutation to the Message of Gov. SEYMOUR, the first he knew of its contents was from reading of it in the newspapers, neither had he any previous knowledge of the men who had been selected for appointment to office under the Governor. The same was true in relation to Mr. BROOKS, Mr. VALLANDIGHAM and Mr. Cox. He had no opportunity of conversing with these gentlemen, and therefore could not speak for them. And now as to the condition of the country, he did not believe that Slavery was the cause of the war. Slavery had existed for eighty years legally in the United States, during which the country had been prosperous and happy. He believed that the chief cause lay in the deep corruption of the officers of the Government, and that we must get them out before the country could be restored to an honorable peace. [Great applause.] They had had for years a party alleging itself with every agitation and discontent—with anything in order to keep itself known. But it had never succeeded in gaining any influence in the United States until now; and he did not believe that it would have done so now, had there been a particle of sense among our once Southern brethren. At Charleston and at Baltimore, they had refused to enter into any arrangement by which the success of the Republican party could have been rendered impossible, and the result was LINCOLN was elected—a result which did not afford a sufficient reason for dissolving the Union. We had been fighting each other ever since, and the result at present was a draw game, with the South as defiant as ever. He had said when war was commenced, declaring for the restoration of the Constitution and Union as it was, the war should be prosecuted with vigor. So said all. The President had said we should have no party but to support the Government, and everybody said Amen. Gen. MCCLELLAN [three cheers] was then in command of the army. But since then, Gen. MCCLELLAN had been turned out, and BURNSIDE had been put in his place; then Gen. BURNSIDE resigned, and now we had Gen. HOOKER, who, he was told by officers of experience, was an able General, and he hoped he might be able to do something for the restoration of peace. He, the speaker, had proposed some time ago, that after we had taken Richmond we should hold a Convention and see what could be done, but that was stouty opposed by the Tribune at the time, and also by the Southern Press and the Southern leaders. The South would not hear of a Convention until after their independence had been recognized; and never while he lived should that recognition take place, if he could help it. They had refused to go into a Convention to remodel the Constitution, while if they had favored it, a new election for President might have taken place in sixty days. [Great applause.] He had never doubted that DAVIS and the other Southern leaders in this rebellion were opposed to a reunion, and, therefore, until the South can put down the men who led her into rebellion, the war must go on. He was utterly opposed to accepting Mediation from any quarter. We must settle the question ourselves, or we had better die at once. The whole loyal portion of the country had been in favor of prosecuting the war, for the objects first declared, and as the President desired, there were no party opposed it. The President did not want opposing parties. But it was true that now they was divisions at the North. And why? Because the declaraton now was that this was a war for Abolition. The President had issued his proclamation to that effect. Now, a proclamation was legally no more than the announcement of an accomplished fact. President LINCOLN had no power to proclaim any change in the laws of the nation until they had been changed by Congress; and, therefore, the slaves were now legally just as much slaves as before the proclamation was issued; and still it had created division at the North. He did not believe the President could incite a negro insurrection by it, and if he could, he believed Union soldiers would put it down. He would have the President stand by the originally declared object of the war, or if not that, the House should refuse to vote another dollar for its support. [Applause.] He would also have the President stick to his no-party platform—not to dismiss a gallant soldier like FITZ JOHN PORTER, [cheers for PORTER,] and restore TOM FORD. [Hisses for FORD.] He would not say anything to bring the Government into contempt, for that was an indictable offence, and he considered it miraculous how Mr. LINCOLN had escaped it so long. In conclusion, he said that there should no longer be distinct organizations in the Democratic Party, such as Tammany and Mozart, they must come together, so that all conservative men could unite with them; have but one Committee and one organization, and they must succeed.
